Dallas testifies, claims self defense

By ANN D. KIRKWOOD
United Press International

CALDWELL (UPI) — A Nevada trapper confessed Wednesday to the gunshot slayings of two Idaho game wardens, but said he drew his gun only after one of the officers threatened to "carry me out" dead and pulled a revolver on the defendant.

Double-murder defendant Claude Lafayette Dallas said he gunned down William Pogue, 50, and Conley Elms, 34, in a shootout at the trapper's remote Idaho campsite after the elder officer became "belligerent" and "hot" with anger and drew his gun.

"Anytime I spoke to him or anytime I moved, he had his hand on the butt of his gun," Dallas told the 10-woman, two-man jury considering first-degree murder charges against him. "That's the first thing I noticed about Bill Pogue... I had the feeling he was itching to use his gun."

The defendant said he "responded in the only way I could have to keep these men from killing me" — by beating Pogue and Elms to the draw. If convicted of killing the men in cold blood, Dallas faces the death penalty.

He said the officers — who were alerted to the poaching by local rancher Ed Carlin — got out of their "government rig," walked up to him, and immediately Pogue confronted the defendant with the alleged violations. Dallas said he acknowledged that he had deer in his camp, but said he needed the carcasses for food.

"A man's got to eat," he said. "In that country, you either eat venison or you eat beef, and I've never killed another man's beef."

Dallas said he told Pogue that he thought it ridiculous for the two Boise officers to drive 150 miles to cite him for killing deer needed for survival, a statement that angered Pogue. Pogue and Elms then "flanked" Dallas as the three walked into the trapper's camp, and Pogue, after confiscating one of Dallas' two guns, ordered his partner to search the defendant's tent.

"I asked him if he had a search warrant," Dallas said. "He said he didn't have one and he didn't need one. I told Pogue that tent was my home; that I didn't want him in it that I believed he needed a search warrant, and if he didn't have one, he couldn't go in."

Dallas said Pogue raised his voice, and Elms proceeded to search the tent, bringing out two illegal hides.

"Pogue was getting increasingly belligerent again and he was on the fight," the trapper said. "He said I could go easy or I could go hard, it didn't make any difference to him."

Dallas said Pogue told him that he would to arrest Dallas and confiscate the hides although the defendant repeatedly asked him just to issue a citation. The defendant said he told Pogue that he couldn't leave his camp because his livestock needed daily feeding, but Pogue responded, "Then you can go hard."

"What did you take that to mean?"

Phil harmony

Gubernatorial candidate Phil Batt brought some jazz music to Twin Falls Wednesday, as the politician turned musician entertained folks at the Turf Club. The fundraiser for the Batt campaign included a buffet and a three-piece band to back Batt up. Batt said he enjoys playing jazz because, "When I play, people can't ask me complicated questions."

Investigators uncover eighth Tylenol death

By SHARON RUTENBERG
United Press International

CHICAGO — Police in Philadelphia Wednesday called the death of a college student six months ago "Tylenol-cyanide-related," adding yet another bizarre twist to the deaths last week of seven people who consumed cyanide-loaded Tylenol capsules.

Investigators in Chicago had no immediate comment on the Philadelphia development.

"If it is true, it is to say the least frightening," said Dr. Peggie Jones, an official with Chicago's Health Department.

Philadelphia police said the death of a graduate student originally believed to have committed suicide was found to have been caused by Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules containing cyanide.

Frank Scafidi, chief of detectives for the Philadelphia police department, said the April 3 death of William Pascual, 26, a student at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School, is a "Tylenol-cyanide-related" death.

The Philadelphia medical examiner said Pascual died from ingesting cyanide, which was found in his stomach and blood. Scafidi said Pascual had left a suicide note and emptied his bank accounts.

A bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol was found in a shoe in a closet in the room where the body was found, Scafidi said. Initial tests on the pills in April were negative, but only three were tested at that time. With the news of the Chicago poisonings, police re-examined all the capsules and found traces of cyanide, Scafidi said.

Scafidi said the case raises "more unanswered questions than answers" and said "it could be" a suicide unrelated to the Chicago deaths.

The wife of the dead man, Kathleen Burkhalter Pascual, told UPI she and her husband had not been in Chicago and had no friends from there.

But she said she had always doubted her husband committed suicide and wanted a complete investigation.

"If there is a link (with the Chicago deaths) ... I want to know," she said.

The bottle came from lot number FE7603 with an expiration date of June 1983. The capsules originally recalled by McNeil Consumer Pro-

Reagan loses his usual cool, barks at right-wing heckler

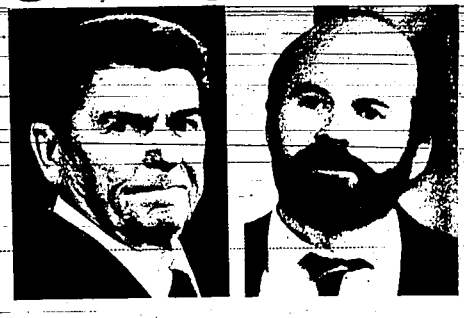
New York Daily News



Angry Reagan confronts Gary Arnold at a GOP session

WASHINGTON — Uncustomarily red-faced and angry, President Reagan Wednesday snapped at a right-wing Republican critic to "shut up" after the heckler repeatedly interrupted a White House pep talk for GOP candidates with charges that Reagan had betrayed conservative causes.

The normally-affable Reagan rarely gets really angry — as opposed to angry-for-show when he assails Democrats on television. But it is not often that a heckler pops up in the White House East Room among 65 GOP congressional candidates described by the President as the "superstars of 1982."

Sitting to Reagan's left at the gathering was Gary Richard Arnold, a candidate running on many of the favorite issues of the extreme conservative fringe. Arnold is waging an almost-hopeless race against Democratic Rep. Leon Panetta in the California district that includes scenic Monterey, Carmel and Big Sur.

After Reagan told his audience that Democratic leaders had lost touch with rank-and-file party members, Arnold shook off the restraining hand of a seat-mate and accused the president of abandoning his opposition to tax increases, his support for Taiwan, and his get-tough policy with Moscow.

"Mr. President, you have given us the largest tax increase in United States history," the bald and bearded Arnold declared in a loud voice. "We do not have the president supporting the presidential program. You've reversed yourself on Taiwan. The Soviets have the largest increase in trade. ... We have a Tylenol taxation situation here. ..."

"You haven't said a word that's true yet," a surprised and angry Reagan barked back. Regaining his composure, he launched into a defense of his policies and at one point even cracked, "I thought this was for Republican candidates."

Evans says land sale will hurt ranches

By The Times-News
and United Press International

BOISE — Gov. John Evans has charged that federal plans to dispose of 13,000 acres of public land near Ketchum could cripple ranchers in that area.

At a press conference Wednesday, Evans and three Ketchum-area ranchers said the federal Bureau of Land Management's plan to dispose of the land proves the Reagan administration hopes to sell massive amounts of the West's public land.

But a BLM spokesman said Wednesday afternoon that Evans was looking at the wrong study when he made those charges, and that the BLM plans to sell only a tiny fraction of the land in question.

In addition, two ranchers from that area contacted by The Times-News, one of whom is Idaho Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa, charged that the governor's statements were simply a publicity stunt.

Evans referred to a BLM document on management policy in the 250,000-acre Sun Valley Resource Area, which classified blocks of federal land near Hailey, north of Fairfield, west of Hill City, and north of Silver Creek — totaling 13,150 acres — as candidates for disposal.

Evans also quoted from a document dated Aug. 17, 1982, from the Property Review Board — a panel created by President Reagan to locate tracts of federal land that should be sold.

That document said the president's budget "projects revenues of $1.25 billion in fiscal year 1983 from the sale of unneeded federal property." It further said Reagan expects $4 billion a year to be earned from property sales each fiscal year, beginning in 1984.

"It is expected that roughly half of these sales will come from real property (mostly from the Department of Defense) and half from the sale of public lands," said the document, which was sent to Evans by a presidential assistant.

Lebanese crack down on Palestinians

By JACK REDDEN
United Press International

Amid Palestinian fears of a forced exodus, Lebanese troops Wednesday expanded their crackdown on illegal refugees for the first time into the southern part of Beirut despite protests from the United States, France and Italy.

The State Department later said Lebanese officials "have been reassuring" that "appropriate safeguards" were taken to guarantee the roundup was "done in a proper manner" and did not violate the rights of Palestinians living in Lebanon legitimately.

It was the first time Lebanon's army took such uncompromising control over all of Beirut since the civil war eight years ago. Their swooping, house-to-house search netted six truckloads of illegal arms caches and dozens — if not hundreds — of illegal aliens.

The crackdown on illegal residents in Lebanon overshadowed diplomatic discussions in Washington on efforts to get all foreign forces out of Lebanon.

U.S. envoy Philip Habib, just back from a two-week fact-finding tour of the Middle East, met with President Reagan and disclosed there is a "better understanding" among the participants to withdraw.

"If you don't get it done quickly, you always run the risk of escalation," Habib said. Six Israelis were killed in an ambush Sunday and Israeli jets struck against positions of Syria's 30,000-man army in the eastern Bekaa Valley.

Israel demands the 7,000 to 8,000 PLO fighters in the Bekaa Valley and the port city of Tripoli leave before a simultaneous Israeli-Syrian withdrawal but PLO chairman Yasser Arafat reportedly scoffed at the suggestion.

The Lebanese crackdown posed a delicate problem for the three peace-keeping nations. Each wants to help Lebanon establish a strong central government but none wants anything to do with charges of human rights violations.

Times-News grows

TWIN FALLS — Beginning today, The Times-News is adding a new page to its Thursday edition.

The regional page, called "Valley Neighbors," will include news and features from across the Magic Valley, and it will highlight stories concerning issues that involve the entire area.

For example, Twin Falls County readers will find news about their friends and relatives who live north of the Snake River. Previously on Thursday, this news was published in a section that was distributed only to subscribers north of the river and in the western part of Twin Falls County. This "limited run" section has been discontinued.

According to managing editor Stephen Hartgen, the regional effort recognizes that news occurring in areas such as Blaine, Gooding, Lincoln and Jerome counties is often of interest to readers living elsewhere.

"The Magic Valley is a loosely-knit, but nonetheless homogenous region where many local issues have impacts far beyond the boundaries of their own communities," Hartgen says."

Initially, the page will appear Thursday, but as additions are made to our correspondent system, the section will appear on other days, too. Persons interested in becoming correspondents for The Times-News should contact city editor Jon Kinney at 733-0931.

Local couple alleges fraud

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — An Idaho couple has filed a $950,000 federal court suit against two Salt Lake City businesses and the corporations' officers, claiming securities fraud.

Carlyle H. and Naomi Larkin of Twin Falls, Idaho, filed the suit Wednesday in the U.S. District Court for Utah, alleging SPC Financial Corp. and SPC Development Co. bilked them out of $198,422 two years ago in a scheme to build housing developments on the Navajo Indian Reservation.

The Larkins claimed they were cheated out of the money and a promise of a 30 percent return on their investment, that the two companies and officers Bernard C. Berney and Peter E. Berney never went through with the deal.

The money was supportedly secured by homes the two Salt Lake companies were building near Shiprock, N.M., and Window Rock, Ariz., on reservations lands, and backed by federal lendings institutions. The Larkins said they were also promised a 99-year lease on reservation lands.

The Larkins are asking for return of their money, plus $750,000 in damages.

Agnew loses final appeal

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — Spiro T. Agnew lost his final bid Wednesday to overturn a quarter-million-dollar judgment against him for accepting bribes as Maryland's governor and later as vice president of the United States.

Maryland's Court of Appeals, the state's highest court, refused to hear Agnew's latest appeal, thus affirming a lower court ruling ordering him to repay the state $147,500 for kickbacks he allegedly received from highway contractors, plus $101,235 in interest.

Neither Agnew, now a resident of Rancho Mirage, Calif., nor his attorney, T. Rogers Harrison, were available for comment.

Killings stopped investigation

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Two U.S. land reform experts and the head of El Salvador's controversial land reform program were killed to stop an inquiry into army-related fraud, an aide to the slain Salvadoran said Wednesday.

The remarks came as U.S. labor sources leaked a court report to The New York Times implicating two officers and a rich Salvadoran businessman in the 1981 murders of Michael P. Hammer, 42, of Pontiac, Md., Mark David Pearlman, 36, of Seattle, and Rodolfo Viera, 43, director of the Salvadoran Agrarian Transformation Institute.

Hammer and Pearlman, employees of the AFL-CIO's American Institute for Free Labor Development, were shot to death with Viera Jan. 3, 1981, in a ballroom adjacent to a crowded coffee shop of the San Salvador Sheraton Hotel.

"I told AIFLD about two months before they were killed that Rodolfo Viera was going to be murdered," said Leonel Gomez, Viera's closest adviser, in a telephone interview from Washington with UPI.

Soviets seek better relations

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Leonid Brezhnev made an appeal for improved Soviet relations with China but a Western diplomat said the speech lacked any sign of "willingness to budge" on the issues separating the two communist giants.

For months Brezhnev has mixed overt and implied criticism of China's leaders with his overtures for normalized relations.

His latest appeal to Peking came in a speech Tuesday before visiting Vietnamese Communist Party official Truong Chinh, who arrived in Moscow to express concern about signs of an improvement in Sino-Soviet relations.

China and the Soviet Union this week in Peking resumed talks on their mutual problems for the first time in nearly three years. Chinh's speech was replete with ideological criticism of the Chinese.

Herpes treatment promising

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gossypol — a cottonseed oil extract used as an experimental male contraceptive in China — in test-tube research apparently kills the genital herpes virus and the microbe that causes gonorrhea, experts in biomedical research said Wednesday.

Studies showing this and leading to two clinical trials of gossypol against genital herpes in humans were conducted by University of Helsinki scientists in Finland.

Experts estimate 20 million Americans have genital herpes, an as yet untamed sexually transmitted disease. Gonorrhea, often symptomless in females and also sexually transmitted, makes tens of thousands sterile each year.

Samaritan gets her job back

LA MESA, Calif. (UPI) — The manager of a Jack-In-The-Box restaurant who refused to let an employee use the business telephone to call an ambulance for a dying man has been fired, a company official said today.

Robert Sue was fired after an investigation of the incident by Foodmaker Inc., owner of the Jack-in-the-Box restaurant chain, said company vice president Charles Duddles.

"I guess I'm the killer now," said a bitter Sue, 64, after his dismissal. "After 18 years (with the company), I get this."

Duddles said the company also reinstated Mary Angela Gray, 17, who was fired by Sue for arguing with him when he refused to let her call for help.

Miss Gray tried to summon help when she saw Paul Kalmer, 76, collapse outside the restaurant Monday. She said she tried to use the fast-food outlet's phone to call paramedics but that Sue told her "not to get involved."

Kalmer died before help arrived.

Sue said he was upstairs at the time and thought the emergency was "another fender bender." He said he fired Miss Gray for talking back to him.

Mini sub stalks the Baltic, seeks trapped Soviet vessel

By CHRISTIAN PALME
United Press International

MUSKO, Sweden — The Swedish navy Wednesday threw a special submarine rescue ship into the search for a suspected Soviet submarine trapped near a strategic military base and called up commandos "to be ready for any events."

The HMS Belos, a salvage ship equipped with a midget submarine for rescue operations, steamed into the search area after more depth charges failed to flush the submarine from hiding.

More than fifteen ships were scouting the area, including surveying ships, coastguard vessels and police boats. A submarine and several smaller ships were moored in the two entrances to the bay, which are blocked with nets.

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass speculated the whole operation may be a "deliberate invention" to create an "atmosphere of tension" and "to shatter trust" between the Soviets and the Scandinavian countries.

"There are grounds for doubt about whether there really is an unidentified object off Sweden's coast," Tass said.

The Belos is equipped with sophisticated listening devices that can locate sunken vessels, but is not equipped with depth charges. There was no immediate word when the midget submarine would be launched to join the search.

Navy Commander Sven Carlsson said elite commando units and anti-aircraft troops were rushed to Musko, less than 20 miles south of Stockholm, "to be ready for any events."

The depth charges dropped Wednesday brought to 25 the number used by the Swedish navy in the 5-day-old attempt to raise the submarine lurking in restricted waters outside the naval base.

The Musko facility is Sweden's largest and most restricted naval base, employing more than 1,100 people in an underground network of shipyards, workshops and radar rooms.

A maze of tunnels, the base's artificial caves contain fully equipped drydocks where submarines and ships as large as destroyers can be docked.

Swedish officials said the depth charges dropped Wednesday were an attempt to damage the submarine to force it to surface.

"We will keep going closer now," said Carlsson. "Our main aim is to damage the submarine's rudders and propeller, which would not stop it from reaching the surface."

Today's weather

Cloudy and rainy weather continues

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:
Cloudy and showery today with chance of mixed rain and snow. Fair and cool Friday. Lows near 27 tonight and highs 50 to 55 today and Friday.

Camas Prairie, Malley, Wood River valley:
Mostly cloudy and colder today and tonight. A few rain showers possibly mixed with snow. West winds 10 to 25 mph.

Northern Nevada and Utah:
Partly cloudy and cooler in northern Nevada, while Utah shows some heavy showers today and clearing on Friday.

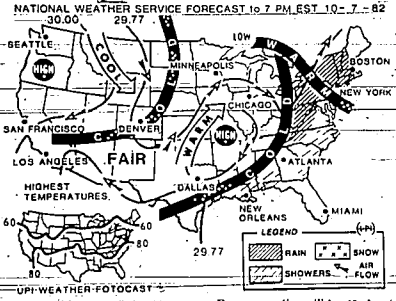
Synopsis:
A strong low pressure system is currently moving onto the West Coast with rain reported from northwest Washington into California. The cold front associated with this system is expected to move across Idaho today. Widespread precipitation is expected. Very cold air will follow in the wake of the cold front so the snow level will be falling to between 4,000 and 5,000 feet today. Cold and blustery conditions are reported for today.

Clear skies prevailed most of the night Tuesday night. But at daybreak, clouds moved over the southwest and northern portions and continued to increase.

Windy conditions held early Wednesday morning low temperatures in the 30s. In the mountains and eastern sections, the mercury dipped into the 20s. Lows for the state ranged from 18 at Fairfield to 44 at Lewiston. High for the state Wednesday was 71 degrees at Boise.

The harvest outlook for haying and potato work will be poor to fair this morning due to showers and cold temperatures. Good conditions will prevail Friday through the early part of next week.

Soil temperatures for potato harvest will be above 45 degrees this morning and fall to around 40 degrees on Friday morning.



Pan evaporation will be .10 of an inch today and .17 on Friday.

The pollen count for Twin Falls Wednesday was 76 particles per cubic foot of air.

The forecast for Friday through Sunday calls for a chance of showers in the north on Friday. Otherwise, dry weather and a warming trend are in the offing.

Elsewhere in the nation, the high temperature Wednesday was 98 at Presidio, Texas, while the low was 17 recorded at Gunnison, Colo.

Government axes 2,000 publications

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration Wednesday put on display 2,000 government publications being eliminated as "unnecessary" — ranging from employee newsletters to research documents on Nazi Germany.

Deputy budget director Joseph Wright Jr. stood next to a towering pile of magazines, books and pamphlets and declared them "costly, redundant and superfluous."

"Publications that have been eliminated are basically those which we feel provide unnecessary information, are duplicative and are being provided at taxpayers' cost whether the taxpayer wants it or not," Wright said.

"You've got 10 publications going out for every household in the United States and growing rapidly. As part of the overall president's program to reduce the size of government, this is a good place to start."

The Office of Management and Budget is proposing that another 236 publications be eliminated through consolidation.

Among the materials in Wright's scrap heap were "Concepts, the Journal of the Defense System Acquisition Management," a Pentagon publication about half an inch thick.

Tylenol

ducts Co., the Tylenol manufacturer, because of the Chicago deaths had expiration dates in 1987.

Scafidi said the information was turned over to Chicago investigators.

The head of the Chicago area investigation said earlier Wednesday a list of suspects has been narrowed to "eight or nine good leads."

"I feel very confident at some point in time we will discover that person," Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner said at a news briefing. "We have eight or nine good leads."

Lab tests Wednesday revealed no cyanide in Tylenol capsules found next to the body of Thomas Isbell, 46, of Kenton, Tenn. He was found dead in his truck with three foil-wrapped Tylenol capsules in the seat beside him. Additional tests were made to determine if the pills contained strychnine.

Dallas

asked defense attorney Michael Donnelly, Boise.

"Hard is only one way — that's dead," Dallas reponded.

"What happened then?" Donnelly asked.

"He (Pogue) said he could carry me out, and that's when he drew his gun," Dallas responded. "I just reacted to it, I went for mine."

He said he fired at Pogue, then out of the corner of his eye saw Elms "go for his gun," and turned to shoot Elms. He said he shot four rounds at Pogue and two at Elms, then rushed into his tent, came out with a loaded .22-caliber rifle and shot the two in the head.

Asked why he shot the officers again, Dallas said, "I was a little bit out of my head at that stage. I was afraid I was wound up."

On cross-examination, Dallas said he felt his next decision — to hide the bodies and flee the area — was correct. The defendant eluded authorities for 15 months before his capture last April in a shootout with officers.

"Because of the lynch-mob attitude the state tried to cultivate against me, I think it would have been suicide if I'd been picked up at that time," Dallas said. "I believed it then, and I believe it more so now."

Dallas also described in detail how he disposed of the two bodies. Elms' body was found in the South Fork of the Owyhee River. Pogue's never has been found. But the defendant provided with the location of Pogue's body, prompting an immediate search of a sand-dunes area in northern Nevada.

Evans

The governor said the Property Review Board document and the BLM management plan show the federal government is ready to move ahead with massive land sales. But Idaho will not be "bullied" into losing its public land, he said.

However, the governor has no need to worry about the state being bullied, according to Charles Haszler, the BLM district manager in Shoshone.

The Sun Valley plan Evans quoted was finished almost a year ago, several months before federal officials began looking for excess land to sell, he said. The 13,000 acres referred to in the study for eventual "disposal" were to be disposed of mainly through trades with the U.S Forest Service, the state and private land owners, Haszler said.

"They were isolated tracts," he said. "They were difficult to manage and they were scattered."

By trading many of these parcels, the BLM could redraw the lines around the land it manages to make more efficient blocks, he said.

But that is a long-range plan, he said. When it comes to plans to sell BLM land in the next five years, he has re-examined all the land slated for eventual disposal to find tracts that should be sold. He has done this in the Sun Valley Resource Area and in the rest of the Shoshone district, he said. And out of the 1.1 million acres of federal land in his district, Haszler expects to sell perhaps 200 to 1,000 acres during the next fiscal year — less than 0.1 percent of the total.

The land will be mainly 40- and 80-acre tracts that are surrounded by private land. Public access to these tracts already is limited. It is difficult for the BLM to manage them. But the owners of the land surrounding the tracts might be able to make efficient use of them, Haszler said.

"These are the kinds of things that would sell readily, and they would (sell) with minimal protest or conflict," he said.

At the press conference in the governor's office, state Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, said disposal of BLM land in his area could seriously hurt his and other ranching operations that lease grazing rights from the federal government.

"It will literally tear small livestock operations apart," Peavey said. Ranchers cannot afford to buy the land from the federal government, so it probably would be purchased by speculators and out-of-state people, who may not be willing to allow continued grazing, he said.

Another Carey rancher, Bud Simpson, agreed "it would be impossible for livestock producers like ourselves to buy this land."

"If this continues, it's going to put a lot of stockmen out of business. People just don't realize how serious this is," said Carey rancher Louis Cenarrusa.

However, his brother said such charges were "politically inspired."

Pete Cenarrusa uses federal land adjacent to some of Peavey's for grazing in his family's livestock business. A Republican and a member of the State Land Board, as is Gov. Evans, Cenarrusa said he is confident the BLM will not sell large amounts of land needed by livestock operators.

Nick Purdy, another rancher who uses federal land in the Sun Valley Resource Area in his livestock operation, said Evans' press conference was just "a publicity stunt."

"When you get these scare tactics in the press, then a lot of good things don't happen," he said. Many isolated tracts of federal land should be sold, Purdy believes, because that would put them on the state's tax rolls and help ranchers operate more efficiently.

The public would not lose any valuable real estate, he said.

"As much review as this stuff goes through, you're not going to slip something by people."

Evans sent a telegram to Reagan on Wednesday reiterating his request that the president withdraw an executive order that set up the Review Board and calling upon him to mandate local input in any land sales proposed.

"They just don't realize the public lands in Idaho aren't for sale," Evans said. "We'll call out the National Guard on this thing if necessary. We're not going to be bullied on this."

Wrong time picked to prosecute draft

The government has won its third case against young men who have refused to register for the draft, but as in the previous cases, it appears the cost has been high.

A federal jury in Cleveland has convicted 22-year-old Mark Schmucker, who claimed draft registration violates his religious freedom. Like the other two young men previously convicted, he made an articulate argument based on his principles.

The government couldn't have singled out more sympathetic victims. Schmucker is no selfish draft protester. Instead, he comes across as a sincere, principled young man who believes he is answering to a higher law in refusing to register.

Such objections generally have met with public sympathy, particularly during the Vietnam war, when thousands of young men refused to serve. In some circles, they were folk heroes, invoking the tradition of Thoreau's "Civil Disobedience."

Despite the Vietnam era, the government apparently has not learned this lesson. Hundreds of thousands of young men have failed to register for the draft. President Reagan himself first said he was opposed to it, then flip-flopped. Given that history, how can compliance be expected?

Now, the government has singled out three sincere young men and made scapegoats of them. The lesson to others is clear: Keep quiet and the government will neither find you nor prosecute you.

The ranks of the military are swelled with young people trying to escape the wide economic recession in America, and we can see no compelling reason why the government should move, at this juncture, to force young men to register.

If and when a true military emergency develops, there will be time enough, and public support for a draft program. But to prosecute these young men now is simply to go through the motions to protect a mistaken policy.

We think that in pushing ahead now, the government weakens, not strengthens, its case for overall military preparedness by playing into high public resistance to today's draft registration.

Weaver won games by judgment

BALTIMORE — Baltimore's Orioles wound up one brick shy of a load this season. After 161 games — about 1,500 innings — they and Milwaukee's Brewers were in a dead heat. Milwaukee won the 162nd game.

I am told, although I remain incredulous, that there are persons who think 162 games are sufficient. But Orioles baseball is a case study of something the nation should study year round: craftsmanship.

In the last 26 seasons the Orioles have the best won-lost record in baseball. The builder of this dynasty is a man who once said of a pitcher, "I gave my Mike Cuellar more chances than my first wife."

Earl Weaver, the source of this and other utterances of pith and moment, retired last Sunday, for the nonce. Weaver's passions are well-known. But his contemplative, calculating side enabled his Orioles teams to finish first or second in 13 of 15 seasons.

The secret of Oriole magic is the mundane: attention to detail. Do the dull things right so the extraordinary things will not be required too often. Not that Weaver's "big bang" theory of baseball makes for dullness. He believes in three-run home runs — "one-swing, then-trot" — innings, because he knows that in most games the winning team scores more runs in one inning than the loser does in nine innings.

My tutor in these mysteries (Thomas Boswell, baseball writer, Washington Post) is the world's preeminent Weaverologist. He quotes the great man saying: "Smart managing is dumb. The three-run homer you trade for in the winter will always beat brains." Weaver's full testament includes this:

"A manager's job is to select the best players for what he wants done. A manager wins games in December. He tries not to lose them in July. You win pennants in the off season when you build your team with trades or free agents. They're not all great players; but they can all do something."

When was the last time you encountered such lucidity from an American in high office? What Weaver is talking about — and exemplifies better than the Supreme Court does — is a quality hard to define, but everywhere indispensable and always recognizable. It is not intelligence, which is plentiful, but judgment, which is scarce.

The question for social scientists is: Why does brawny Baltimore have such a relationship with this brainy ball club? Perhaps it is because Baltimore is just the right size and sort of American city. It is lumpy with ethnic groups. Its social fabric is not smooth worsted; it is rich, rough, complex tweed. The Orioles do for Baltimore what the space program did for America: The team is what all have in common.

As the Orioles' radio announcers signed off until spring, one of them gave an unself-conscious and almost unurban pep talk that expressed the way baseball has twined its silken fetters around this city, and in doing so, had made it more of a community. He said approximately this: "I know there are lots of sad kids out there who won't feel like eating tonight. But the good Lord wanted Milwaukee to win, and there is always next year, so, kids, dry your eyes and drink your milk." So that's what I did.

Word, data processing changing how we do business

CHICAGO — For the past year, since Congress took its first half-step on Mr. Reagan's road to recovery, the media vultures who feed on bad news have been croaking about the weaknesses in our economy — the bankruptcies, the business failures, the high rate of unemployment, the sad plight of automobiles, housing and steel.

Fair enough. There's no disputing the bad news. But without putting on the Pollyanna act, let me sketch another side of the picture. Consider, if you please, the revolutionary changes that are taking place in the American business office. Just for a minute or two, let us consider our strengths.

I flew out to Chicago a couple of days ago to deliver Old No. 1 before a luncheon of the National Office Products Association. I hung around to marvel at what is going on. Has American inventiveness gone to the bowwows? Is our marketplace down with a wasting disease? Don't you believe it. At Chicago's vast McCormick Place, the joint is jumping.

These days it is hard to recall the business offices that most of us grew up with. We had three mechanical contraptions — the two-piece telephone, the manual typewriter and the hand-cranked adding machine. We posted our books by hand in a standard Boorum & Pease ledger, bound in black with trim in red and gold. Those were the armband and eyeshade days, and they weren't so very long ago.

I still type my own stuff on a rimfire Underwood, but I am among the last of the dinosaur breed. The International Data Corp. recently offered some projections on the new world ahead. There are now an estimated 52 million white-collar workers. By 1986 their numbers will have increased to 55 million, and their individual productivity will have soared. Today only one out of five office workers has a keyboard; four years hence, only one in five will not have a keyboard.

The technology of word processing, data storage and data retrieval changes at bewildering speed. New generations of computer software tread upon one another's feet. When I left daily newspapering in 1966, wonderful new computers were just revolutionizing our composing rooms. The machines were as big as hall closets. Today those computers are regarded with the nostalgic affection reserved for steam locomotives and the DC-3. A little chip now does it all.

The International Data Corp. projects sales for the industry over the next four years of $180 billion in products that, for the most part, did not even exist 10 years ago. Five thousand vendors are competing in a market of 12,000 products. The electronic typewriter — as distinguished from the merely electric typewriter — is a product so hot that a sales growth of 28 percent per year is foreseen. Personal computers will soon be as commonplace as dishwashing machines.

To the non-mechanical person — meaning me — the exhibits are flabbergasting. But even the observer who has trouble changing a light bulb can comprehend that we are witnessing changes not in degree, but in kind. This is not true of other industries. We still build houses the old way, one 2-by-4 at a time. The internal combustion engine is at bottom the same old engine.

But in the office — as in medicine, printing and communication — the changes are profound. Although Japanese and European manufacturers are coming on strong, this is still primarily an American revolution. For the aggressive competitor, the marketing challenges are exciting, and the potential profits promise bonanzas to the winners.

The human problems are as formidable as the electronic innovations are amazing. Millions of clerical workers must be trained to use these new machines. For middle-aged workers — and for middle-aged teachers of secretarial and office skills — some traumatic times lie ahead. The high school senior who has not mastered at least the basics of computer language will enter the job market already behind in the race.

We spend too much time worrying over our weaknesses. These too will pass. For a change, let us hear a few whistles of admiration for the vitality so evident at McCormick Place this week. The Republic will yet survive.

James Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View" from Washington.

Let's roll this script, Ronnie, and blame Washington

It is no secret that Ronald Reagan works best from a script. Therefore, the other day, just before he went out on the road to campaign for Republican candidates, his writers handed him a bunch of new pages to read.

"Okay, Ronnie, now here's the story line. You've been President of the United States for two years, and no matter what you've tried to solve the country's economic problems, nothing has worked. So you're licked off because people are starting to blame you for their troubles. You're no longer going to be Mr. Nice Guy."

Ronnie studied the script. "Gosh, you really want me to say that the Democrats are responsible for the rotten mess we've been in for the last 40 years?"

"Right. But you must do it with feeling. The people have to believe that you inherited the biggest financial disaster of anybody who ever sat in the Oval Office. You've tried to do something about it but the fat Democratic spenders in Congress have stood in your way. Can you do it with feeling?"

"Gee whillikers. It's so out of character for me. What's my motivation for becoming a demagogue?"

"You're on the hot seat because the 1982 Senate and House elections are coming up, and the Democrats are laying the blame on you for a stagnant economy, high interest rates and two-digit unemployment. If you don't come out fighting you'll lose a Republican Senate and 40 or 50 seats in the House."

"I get it. By attacking Congress, I'm still a good guy because I'm trying to save the country."

"That's the way we wrote it. Now in this scene you are talking to the people who still believe in you, but occasionally there is a heckler in the audience who starts yelling for a job while you're talking. You never get flustered by him. You say, 'Look in the want ads.'"

"I like that line."

"It never fails to get the audience on their feet."

Ronnie went over the pages. "How about this one where I say, 'The fall elections offer a clear choice about the kind of nation we will be — whether we will continue our sure and steady course to put America back on track, or whether we will slide backward into another economic binge like the one which left us with today's pounding national hangover.' That's a big mouthful for me to say."

"We'll leave it in for Richmond, Virginia. If it doesn't get a laugh we can always drop it out on your next campaign stop."

Ronnie kept turning the pages. "Jumping bullfrogs, I see you have me blaming Washington for all our problems. Suppose they say I'm part of the problem now."

"Ignore what they say. We figure your best bet is to attack Jimmy Carter for the mess you inherited. The way we've written it whatever you can't blame on Carter you blame on Tip O'Neill. This is the part of the picture where you really go for the jugular. Can you do it, Ronnie?"

"I'm going to try my darnedest, if you're sure the people will still root for me."

"They'll root for you, Ronnie, because the way we've written it you're the white hat, and the Democrats are the bad guys. The more you say it, the more they'll believe it."

"Are all these facts in the script correct?"

"Don't worry about facts. If you read it with conviction people will believe you whether the facts are true or not. Okay, get on your horse and let's start the cameras and see how it plays."

"QUIET ON THE SET. TAKE ONE, 'THE GIPPER FIGHTS BACK.' ROLL 'EM."

Art Buchwald writes from Washington for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Officials ignored radiation evidence

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Officials conducting open air A-bomb tests during the 1950s and 1960s ignored evidence downwind radiation levels were 1,000 times greater than monitors indicated, a former Atomic Energy Commission scientist testified Wednesday.

And if a heavy rain had fallen on St. George, Utah, after one particularly "dirty" bomb blast in 1953, "it would have killed half to all of the town" of 5,000, Harold Knapp said.

Knapp, who did research on the test program for the AEC, testified in a multi-million dollar damage suit brought by residents of Utah, Nevada and Arizona. They claim fallout from the atomic bomb tests caused cancer deaths and illnesses in their families.

Knapp, now a Defense Department scientist, said AEC officials who ran the test program were sensitive to criticism and tended to ignore evidence people were being exposed to high levels of radioactive fallout.

There were signs "radiation doses received by individuals were 100 to 1,000 times greater than the low level doses their monitors were indicating," he said.

"There were reports of goats turning blue and people getting sick, and the conclusions were that it had nothing to do with the radiation exposure. But nobody ever bothered to find out why the goats turned blue."

The statement brought a vigorous objection from Justice Department attorney Henry Gill, who claimed Knapp was reaching unfair conclusions about what was going through the minds of people responsible for the program.

Brokers predict bad future for WPPSS

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Washington Public Power Supply System may be on "a collision course with default" and pose "considerable risk" for investors, says a new analysis by a New York brokerage firm.

The firm, Drexel Burnham Lambert, says WPPSS financial health is rapidly deteriorating and that the nuclear construction giant may have trouble paying its debts on two closed nuclear plants.

Author of the report, Drexel Burnham Lambert Vice President Eileen Titmuss, said, "WPPSS is again running against the clock, and this time the momentum of events may be too great to halt with the brinksmanship that has been played out before."

The brokerage firm was the first to predict termination of WPPSS' last two nuclear plants.

WPPSS had no comment on the glum report, but promised to make its financial advisers available later in the week to discuss the situation.

Standard & Poor's, one of the nation's two major bond rating firms, put securities for the firm's two abandoned plants on its "credit watch" list, a possible sign of another downgrading of bond ratings to come.

The bonds currently are rated BBB plus, meaning that the bond rating firm believes that WPPSS has "adequate capacity" to repay the $7 billion owed in principal and interest.

WPPSS received another set-back last week when an Oregon judge overturned contracts between utilities and WPPSS that were not formally approved by the ratepayers. WPPSS is appealing that decision.

A similar ruling against utility contracts for the two abandoned plants could jeopardize all WPPSS plants, Titmuss said.

Despite doubts on Wall Street, Seattle brokerage firms reported that WPPSS bonds still are selling at a high price.

Power surplus makes crisis for BPA

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Bonneville Power Administration faces a "crisis" because of a power surplus in the Northwest and is attempting to relieve the problem by passing the high cost of nuclear plant construction to ratepayers in California, a confidential memo leaked to the press says.

But that plan is being thwarted by a lawsuit filed by the California Energy Commission and the fact that there already is a glut of power on the intertie line linking the Northwest to California, the memo says.

The memo was written by Eric Redman, a Seattle attorney for Northwest aluminum producers. It was sent anonymously Tuesday to Seattle newspapers and Rep. Mike Lowry, D-Wash.

The memo details negotiations for an out-of-court settlement being pursued by the BPA and the CEC. The suit filed by the CEC contends the rates being charged by the BPA are too high.

Redman wrote that the negotiations have been stymied by the CEC staff and its attorney, Dan Meek. The memo claimed at one point that Meek and a superior had "managed to prevent direct access" when Redman sought a meeting with the CEC Commissioner Arturo Gondara.

Addressed to Brett Wilcox, a Portland attorney representing other big industrial users of BPA power, the memo also contends BPA Administrator Peter Johnson faces a "potential disaster" because of the excess of power and the lack of purchasers.

The surplus threatens to delay further financing for the construction of the Washington Public Power Supply System's No. 1 nuclear reactor, which the BPA is underwriting at high cost. Despite the present surplus, aluminum companies want the plant completed to ensure an adequate power supply in the 1990s.

Oregon testing for cyanide

SEATTLE (UPI) — Analysis of more than 8,000 capsules in a suspect batch of Extra-Strength Tylenol from Oregon has not turned up any of the cyanide that killed seven people in the Chicago area, federal investigators said Wednesday.

Tylenol shipments from warehouses in Portland and Roseburg, Ore., continued to stream in to the Seattle lab of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Scientists said they did not expect to find any cyanide in the capsules, some of which carried the same lot numbers as the Tylenol capsules taken by the victims in Illinois.

Surrounded by glass and stainless steel testing equipment, analytical chemist John LaRose led reporters and photographers through the lab's cyanide testing procedure.

Each capsule is visually inspected for tampering, then opened by hand and its contents dumped into tiny individual piles. The powder from capsules out of a bottle is then mixed and poured back into the bottle for further testing.

In the subsequent 10-minute chemical analysis, a gram of powder from the bottle is dissolved in ethyl alcohol and three reagents — ferrous sulfate, sodium hydroxide and ferric chloride — are added to produce an active chemical solution.

The mix then receives two drops of sulfuric acid before being heated gently in a steam bath.

The presence of cyanide, LaRose said, is indicated by a blue-colored solution or precipitate in the test glass. The solution takes on a tan or brown color if cyanide is absent.

Idaho Power appeals order

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. said Wednesday it would ask the Idaho Supreme Court to nullify a state order that requires the firm to buy cogenerated electricity from a Wyoming producer at a long-term, fixed price.

The Boise utility hinted last week it would take the dispute to the high court after the state Public Utilities Commission twice rejected an Idaho Power appeal of its contract with Afton Energy Inc., Afton, Wyo.

"Our contention is that the PUC does not have the jurisdiction to set a fixed rate, and for over a fixed period of time, and force us to enter a contract for that," said Idaho Power spokesman Larry Taylor.

"This is a very difficult issue and it's not going to be cleared up any place else," Taylor said. "The commission feels it's moot, but we still feel like it still needs to be decided."

Taylor said the utility was not disputing the price set by the PUC for the power purchase from the Afton wood-waste plant. But he said the firm objected to being tied to a price with room for only slight changes. He said a drop in the value of the Afton energy sometime in the next 35 years without an "escape" clause for Idaho Power would be a costly burden for the utility and its shareholders and customers.

He said Idaho Power was not trying to overturn the entire contract, but get the Supreme Court to allow the utility to reopen the contract before the PUC in later years if its see fit.

What's what

Divorced men remarry sooner than divorced women, generally. And the women that the divorced men marry of late usually have good jobs. So reports a Love and Warstatistician, not our own. The new no-fault divorce laws were supposed to equalize the financial burdens of divorce. In fact, though, a 10-year study in California indicates they make divorce far less disastrous for men than for women.

How many things can you come up with that aren't usually handed out free anymore? Start with road maps, matchbooks and tavern lunches.

More hotdogs are sold at Chicago's O'Hare airport than at any one other place in the world.

GOLDEN VOICE

Q. What show biz personality makes the most money these days?

A. Singer Wayne Newton, probably. At $500,000 a week for 32 weeks a year in Vegas.

Q. I heard a woman at the butcher shop ask for "a pound of skirt"? What's that?

A. Flank steak. A British term also used in some places here.

Q. How much should a golfer tip a caddy?

A. How about 15 percent of the green fees for 18 holes, 20 percent for nine holes? That's the recommendation of an outfit called Tippers International of Oshkosh, Wis.

FRACTURES

Prince, American actress vacation to remote island

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent (UPI) — Britain's Prince Andrew flew to the tiny Caribbean island of Bequia Wednesday for a vacation — reportedly — accompanied by a U.S.-born actress who has twice appeared nude in films.

Queen Elizabeth's strikingly handsome 22-year-old son, nicknamed "Randy Andy" because of his eye for the ladies, and actress Koo Stark left Heathrow Airport Tuesday under the assumed names of "Mr. and Mrs. Cambridge," the Daily Express said.

Polovchak case to be heard

CHICAGO (UPI) — Walter Polovchak, the Ukrainian boy granted political asylum, will get a hearing before the Illinois Supreme Court in his effort to avoid returning to his parents' custody in the Soviet Union.

The youth ran away from home more than two years ago after his parents, Michael and Anna Polovchak, informed him they were planning to return to their native Ukraine.

'Tea-ed off' citizens protest

By MARK SCHWED
United Press International

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Sparked by a radio talk show, Americans "tea-ed off" about high taxes and Uncle Sam's bulging purse are shipping hundreds of used tea bags to congressional leaders in Washington.

One tea bag bore the message: "Remember Boston Harbor."

The "Great American Tea-A-Thon" was launched unknowingly last week by a Bastrop, Texas, woman who was fed up with "tax, tax, tax, spend, spend, spend." She called in her complaints to WLAC radio's "The Bill Steensland Show."

The woman vowed to mail a symbolic tea bag to her representatives in Washington, but Steensland suggested she send just two — one to Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker and the other to House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill.

Within an hour the phones were buzzing with people across the country pledging to send tea bags of their own.

So far, about 300 tea bags have been received in Washington, although 17,500 have been pledged.

"This is kind of a national expression of frustration," said Steensland, whose show is broadcast to 28 states. "There is no leadership to it, no organization. It is simply a statement to Congress to stop spending."

One caller observed Americans are "tea-ed off" about high taxes and big spending.

Spokesmen for Baker and O'Neill said they were puzzled by the tea bags.

"The guys in the Boston Tea Party didn't send a note to the king saying here's what we're doing," Steensland said. "If they don't know what the Boston Tea Party was and taxation without representation then they probably shouldn't be representing us."

Ratification of UAW pact called doubtful by Fraser

DETROIT (UPI) — A tiny California local Wednesday became the first to approve a tentative United Auto Workers contract with Chrysler Corp., but UAW President Douglas Fraser said passage of the agreement was "doubtful."

Other union leaders agreed the agreement with the No. 3 automaker appeared headed for certain defeat, which would force a return to the bargaining table.

The San Leandro, Calif., parts depot Local 76, one of three locals voting Wednesday, approved the agreement 33-7. But five locals, including workers at three of Chrysler's five assembly plants, all have shot down the contract and the running vote total was more than 2-to-1 against.

There are 54 Chrysler locals in the country and the ratification deadline is Oct. 14.

UAW President Douglas Fraser, in a telephone interview from New York with the Detroit Free Press, said he at first had been "hopeful, (but) now I'm doubtful (of the contract's passage) and tomorrow I'll probably be hopeless."

"People see that it is going down the tube, so they say, 'What the hell,' and they vote it down too," he said.

"The only way this is going to pass is for the remaining locals to approve the measure by a 68 percent vote," said Bobb Weissman, president of Local 122 in Twinsburg, Ohio, which Tuesday turned down the agreement more than 7-to-1.

"How could that happen? It is inconceivable," he said.

San Leandro was one of three small locals with a combined membership of 3,120 voting on the contract Wednesday.

Results from the St. Louis UAW Local 136, with 2,600 members, were not expected until Thursday. Results from the tiny Detroit glass plant were not immediately available.

Along with the Twinsburg plant, workers at three Detroit area facilities and one each in Illinois and Delaware turned down the contract this week by substantial margins.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca was blamed by several union leaders as the reason workers were opposed to the contract. In recent weeks, Iacocca has boasted about Chrysler's $1 billion reserve in cash and securities.

"He did a very good job of persuading our members the money was there," said Bill Sims, president of Local 849 in Detroit. "The greatest factor here is that gentleman who heads the corporation.

"Members were led to believe, as the result of (Iacocca's) continuous expounding on the company's health, that there was money there and that the (union) committee was lax in not getting it."

Columbia crew outlines mission

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Members of the first four-man crew ever to fly an American space mission said Wednesday they were "99 percent ready" to fly the fifth space shuttle flight Nov. 11.

"I'm enthused and excited," said mission commander Vance Brand, 51, a veteran of the 1975 Russian-American Apollo-Soyuz mission. "We're 99 percent of the way there. The final 1 percent is tuning up."

The men will take off from Florida's Kennedy Space Center and will land five days later at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Brand said he and his crew of space rookies — Bob Overmyer, Joe Allen and Bill Lenoir — would continue working on preparations to deploy two communications satellites for the shuttle's first two paying customers, Telesat Canada and Satellite Business Systems of Virginia.

The two companies are paying about $10 million each to have their satellites launched from the shuttle.

"The primary objective is to deploy two commercial satellites. Everything else is really secondary," said Lenoir, 43, a mission specialist on this flight.

The two satellites will spring out of the cargo bay on the first and second days of the mission. Then the shuttle will move 12 miles away and rockets on the satellites will fire, pushing them from the space shuttle Columbia's 160-mile altitude to a parking orbit 23,000-miles above the Earth.

Environmentalists identify the 'filthy five'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An environmental organization singled out four Republican Senate candidates Wednesday for accepting more than $10,000 each in campaign contributions from a "filthy five" group of corporate polluters.

Heading up the list compiled by Environmental Action is Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn. — listed as receiving $22,300 from political action committees of employees from the five corporations.

Listed second is Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., for receiving $11,800. Tied for third are Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Virginia GOP Senate candidate Paul Trible, who both received $10,500 from the five companies.

A Lugar spokesman, Mitch Daniel, called the report "very unfair to impune the motives or records of senators, based simply on the receiving of campaign support — support which is a speck of sand in the finances of a statewide campaign."

He noted the $11,800 listed for Lugar "amounts to less than four-tenths of 1 percent of our campaign budget."

Environmental Action said it selected the five corporations "for their long history of environmental violations and large contributions by their political action committees to congressional candidates."

Iraq mounts 'fierce' attack

By United Press International

Iraq said Wednesday it launched a sweeping counter-attack that killed 2,300 Iranians in the "fiercest" fighting of the 2-year-old Persian Gulf war. Iran said its warjets struck back and inflicted heavy damage on Iraqi tank columns.

The Baghdad military command said Iraqi forces had "annihilated" Iranian troops with a counter-offensive in the border mountains around Mendali, 64 miles east of Baghdad.

"The only survivors out of the invading Iranian forces were those who have managed to escape or those who were captured and their number is limited," said the state-run Iraqi News Agency.

Iraq said some 2,300 Iranian soldiers were killed in Wednesday's fighting alone, which it described as the "fiercest" since Iraqi forces invaded Iran Sept. 22, 1980.

U.S. intelligence sources said the fighting was confined largely in the hilly Sowmar region on the Iranian side of the border, about 100 miles northeast of Baghdad, with between 10,000 to 15,000 troops on each side.

The intelligence sources said the Iraqis are holding onto the high ground, firing artillery onto attacking Iranian troops and making best use of their their air force, the sources said.

Iraq captured portions of Iranian territory in the north during the early stages of the Gulf war. Iran launched its long-awaited massive offensive last week, and claimed it pushing Iraqi forces back toward their mutual border.

Tehran Radio, without acknowledging the Iraqi claims, said Iranian troops had infiltrated Iraqi lines on the "western operational front," killing and wounding Iraqi soldiers. The announcement gave no casualty figures.

Tehran Radio said Iranian warplanes flew over Iraq and bombed "several targets," inflicting heavy losses and knocking out three tanks.

The U.S. intelligence sources, however, said Iraq — not Iran — held air superiority in the latest battle.

Tehran radio also said Iranian forces had destroyed at least 50 Iraqi positions in Wednesday's fighting, setting two depots on fire.

Italy investigates plot to kill pope

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Italy's chief investigator into the attempt on Pope John Paul II's life visited the Justice Department Wednesday and watched a television documentary suggesting the Kremlin was involved in the shooting.

Justice Department officials said Magistrate Ilario Martella flew to the United States to review information reported by the news media and to take depositions from Americans who witnessed the shooting in Rome last year.

The pope was shot May 13, 1981, by Mehmet Ali Agca, a self-proclaimed "international terrorist" from Turkey. Agca was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment.

But Italian authorities have made little headway in their investigation of whether anyone else was involved. Within days of the attack, Italian police said they were convinced someone had supplied Agca with money and other support in the months before the attempted assassination.

Only one person has been arrested as a suspected accomplice in the shooting — a Turkish youth who is charged with passing Agca the gun used in the attack.

A Justice Department official said the agency is cooperating with Martella as it would with any foreign official trying to gather information for an investigation.

The official said Martella is in the United States to gather information in the shooting of the pope as well as for another, unrelated case that the official declined to disclose.

Walesa against killing Solidarity

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Interned Solidarity leader Lech Walesa will never sanction the "liquidation" of his suspended trade union — expected to be outlawed by Parliament this week, Walesa's wife said Wednesday.

Danuta Walesa, in a telephone interview from her apartment in the northern coastal city of Gdansk, said her husband did not see a place for himself in new Polish trade unions to be formed after Solidarity is officially banned.

"He will never approve the liquidation of Solidarity," said Mrs. Walesa, whose husband has been under detention since the imposition of martial law last Dec. 13.

Mrs. Walesa also said she did not believe rank-and-file Solidarity members would join the new unions, which a government proposal said would be "independent from state administration" but aided by the "guiding role of the (Communist) Party."

Mrs. Walesa, whose husband is being held at a government rest center in southeastern Poland about 8 miles from the Soviet border, said her family longed for a "normal life."

Libya claims shooting of U.S. spy jet

By United Press International

Libya said Wednesday it shot down an "American spy plane" over its territory last month, but the United States denied the report.

The Libyan news agency said the plane was attached to the U.S. 6th Fleet and was downed Sept. 2, but that an announcement about the incident was delayed until Libyan officials could be certain of the aircraft's identity.

It is the second time in 14 months that the United States and Libya have been involved in a dispute about Libyan air space.

The Libyan news agency, in a report monitored in London, said the aircraft was "deceptively" flying along an international air corridor used by civilian jetliners to ensure their safe passage over North Africa.

The statement issued by the agency said, "The Libyan air defense on Thursday Sept. 2 downed an American spy plane over the Benghazi region." The Benghazi region is located in northeast Libya on the Mediterranean.

In Washington, however, the State Department emphatically denied the claim.

"There is absolutely nothing to the (Libyan) report. No American planes were shot down," State Department spokesman Alan Romberg. His denial included pilotless spy planes.

Dear Abby

Mom upset with ex-husband's smoking game with daughter

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are separated. When he comes to visit our 10-year-old daughter, I try to make his visits pleasant for all of us.

He is a smoker, I am not. He has agreed not to smoke in my house. However, he teases our daughter by asking her if she wants a cigarette, then he instructs her to get one out of the pack and put it in his mouth. (He doesn't light it.)

He knows I disapprove of this, but he does it in a joking way. Not wanting to cause any arguments, I say nothing.

A few days ago, he put an unlit cigarette in HER mouth. I had to leave the room to keep from telling him off in front of our daughter. Later when we were alone, I stated my objections. He brushed them off and said I was "overreacting."

Soon our daughter will be spending weekends with him, and I am worried that his "joking" with cigarettes will continue. And, of course, he can smoke in his own house.

Am I overreacting? Both my husband and I love this child. How should I handle this?

— CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: Tell your husband that you disapprove of the positive message he is giving your daughter with regard to smoking. Not only is he letting her think that smoking is OK, he is subtly encouraging her to smoke. That reason is obvious. He's trying to get your goat. Tell your daughter she is not to put a cigarette in her mouth, and forbid your husband to play any more cigarette games with the child.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to marry a man who was married before, and we're having a major disagreement. He still wears his wedding ring, even though I have asked him to please put it away. He claims the only reason he wears it is because he "likes" it.

To my way of thinking, a wedding ring is more than just a piece of jewelry — it symbolizes something. Is my request unreasonable?

— FQOLISH IN PHOENIX

DEAR FOOLISH: No. Your fiance is either consciously or unconsciously reluctant to "let go" of his first marriage. If you let him put a wedding ring on your finger while he is still wearing his, you are indeed foolish.

DEAR ABBY: Is there a way to keep someone from attending a funeral? A relative of mine is not going to last much longer, and he has told me that if "H" shows up at the wake, funeral or cemetery, I should throw her out!

The dying relative detests "H" with a passion — and for good reason. I promised him that "H" will not get in.

That's my problem, Abby. There will be funeral services in a church. How do you keep someone out of church? And how do you keep them from going to a cemetery?

I have given my solemn promise, and I intend to keep it. But how?

— SEEING RED IN READING, PA.

DEAR SEEING: First, advise the person who is not welcome that it will be a private funeral. Then hire a security guard. Have him stationed at the door together with someone who can identify the person who is not welcomed. (You, perhaps?) And if the "crasher" shows up, the security guard will "guide" her gently but firmly away.

HELLO! What do you think of "Hello!" for a salutation for a letter?

— EVY

DEAR EVY: Not much. Goodbye!

Solo eaters could be pigging out

BY ERMA BOMBECK
Field Enterprise, Inc.

People who eat alone do not eat "human" . . . as we know it.

I'm not talking about the single diner in a restaurant who has a five-page menu in front of him to pick and choose from. I'm talking about the person alone who puts together whatever is around the house.

Women who are separated or widowed tell me they go through stages. At first, they cook the way they used to, trying to balance a diet and eat what is good for them. After awhile, they start eating the things they could never eat before: catsup on egg salad, fried mashed potatoes, chili for breakfast, or a baked potato sprinkled over sour cream and chives.

It's almost as if what you eat signifies a freedom you've never had before. A friend of mine who was just divorced invited me to dinner one night. She opened a large jar of peanut butter, cored an apple for each of us on a plate to dip in the peanut butter and asked, "What do you want to drink?"

I had my first experience of eating alone for a long period of time last year when I produced a TV show for television. Every night for a week, I had burnt popcorn swimming in butter and a light beer. ("Are you telling me I wrote all day, made 93 phone calls, sat through three meetings and one rehearsal, fought L.A. traffic and smog for a light beer?")

The second week, I had seven different kinds of pasta. The third week was my Sara Lee festival. Then I had brown sugar on my eggs. I made gravy out of hamburger grease and poured it over a half loaf of bread. I had a root beer float and a dressing sandwich at bedtime. I ate leftovers I couldn't even identify, let alone digest.

Did my teeth fall out? Did my bones crumble? Did I get sick? No to all of the above, which leads me to believe that nutrition is overrated. We don't cook things we really like to eat. We cook to impress whoever is around.

There's another phenomenon about people who eat alone. They tell everyone that because they don't have to cook for someone, they're going to cut back and lose some weight. They're lying through their teeth. All day, visions of a jacuzzi filled with spaghetti dance in their heads and they can hardly wait to get inside their houses at night, close the draperies and pig out.

I know that dining alone is lonely beyond description, but one night when my husband and kids were out, I polished off a chicken leg and impulsively threw it under my arm and it landed with a thud in the sink.

Lord, I felt decadent.

Glenda Belk is escorted by defense attorney Greg Fuller to her preliminary hearing in the Jerome County Courthouse

Bribery?

Investigators say Jerome County Clerk handed over 'gifts'

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

JEROME — Fifth District Magistrate Judge Roger Burdick delayed acting Wednesday on a motion to dismiss a five-count bribery indictment against Jerome County Clerk Glenda Belk.

The felony charges stem from gifts Belk allegedly received for purchasing office supplies from a California firm, American Data Products Co.

The company was implicated earlier this year in a Blaine County probe of questionable sales tactics.

At a preliminary hearing Wednesday in Jerome, an investigator from the state attorney general's office said authorities became aware of purchases by Jerome County from American Data Products while executing a search warrant of the firm's offices in Van Nuys, Calif.

Among the documents seized was an invoice indicating that a lighted makeup mirror was sent to Belk's home after a January purchase of supplies totaling $1,497, said Neal Custer, a deputy attorney general.

The company's records indicated that the clerk's office had made 12 purchases from American Data Products within the last three to six years, Custer said.

Belk first denied accepting gifts from the company when she was questioned about the purchases on April 8, Custer said. But after consulting with Jerome County Prosecutor Bill Dalling, she agreed to relinquish five gifts, including a stereo cassette player and a bentwood rocking chair.

Custer said other documents seized from the company indicated that a typical sales pitch offered purchasers a choice of gifts, depending on the size of their orders.

Defense lawyer Jim Meservy asked Custer if the gifts could be considered less than top-quality merchandise, but Burdick sustained an objection from Special Prosecutor Harry DeHaan that the question was not relevant.

The bribery statute, Burdick said, specifies "any benefit" given or offered in exchange for discretion by a public official.

Chief defense lawyer Greg Fuller called Mel Grindstaff, the chairman of the Jerome County Board of Commissioners, to testify about procedures for approving and recording purchases made by county departments.

Grindstaff said county records indicate that purchases from American Data Products also were made by the prosecutor's office, the agricultural extension office and the assessor's office.

DeHaan said that his office did not file charges against other Jerome County officials because it could not prove the gifts were received for the purchases, some of which date back to 1978.

At the conclusion of Grindstaff's testimony, Fuller moved for dismissal of the charges, saying the prosecution had presented insufficient evidence to show that there was "social harm or personal gain" from the transactions.

Burdick said that he would study the more than 40 documents and photographs before deciding whether to rule in favor of the motion or to order the defendant to stand trial in district court.

On an unrelated count charging Belk with submitting fraudulent travel claims, Burdick allowed Fuller 10 days to submit additional briefs. Fuller said that he will contend the travel vouchers and warrants placed into evidence show no crime was committed.

Meanwhile, Belk, a candidate for re-election, admitted Wednesday that the Internal Revenue Service recently placed a lien against her wages as county clerk. The lien seeks payment of $3,500, plus interest and penalties, for non-payment of taxes in 1980.

Belk said that since then, she has agreed to pay the sum, which she said resulted from financial problems related to a divorce the same year.

Filer finally strikes water

New well gushes at 650 feet

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

FILER — After drilling to 650 feet, well-drillers finally have hit enough water to quench the thirst of the water-rationed city of Filer.

A six-hour preliminary test conducted Tuesday, using a temporary pump, resulted in the new municipal well pumping 520 gallons of water per minute, according to Councilman Bob Fort.

"It looks like it's going to be all right," said Councilman Roq Stokesberry.

The new well, located at the north end of Stevens Street, will replace a well that had collapsed in May. The old well had pumped approximately 450 gallons of water per minute and had provided half of the city's water supply during periods of peak demand.

When it caved in, the city was forced to ration water.

Last week, Arnold Elsing Well Drilling of Twin Falls finished drilling to the 650-foot depth, but the well was not tested until Tuesday.

The final analysis of the test, to be made by Anderson and Kelly, a Boise geological firm, may show that the water flow "could be even better than this," Fort said.

"It probably would have pumped out more, but it was pumping in a ditch" which filled up, Councilman Richard Schweitzer said.

The static water level in the well is dropping at a rate of only two-and-a-half feet in 15 minutes, "which means there's an excellent flow underneath," Fort said.

A test of the composition of the well water showed it to have 1.47 parts per million of fluoride, which is within the legal limits, Stokesberry said.

Now that the new well looks like it will be a success, the next step will be to install permanent pumps and a pumphouse. That work will take another four to six weeks.

"We anticipate using city crews more than planned" to install the equipment, so the city can save money, Fort said, because the project is costing more than was projected.

Drilling the new well will cost approximately $20,000 — instead of the estimated $8,786 — because it had to be drilled deeper than expected, and the drillers encountered solid rock, he said.

The city received an emergency grant of approximately $55,000 from the state to fund the project.

However, Fort said that the well-drilling bill, plus engineering fees and the pump and pumphouse, "will just about eat it (the grant) up."

Sugar company begins 4-month processing season

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Amalgamated Sugar Co. is scheduled to begin a four-month sugar-beet processing "campaign" today.

At one time, the start of the Twin Falls sugar plant had been scheduled for last Sunday. But poor weather for harvesting moved the planned start back until today.

That start-up date is fairly firm, with sugar-beet growers in Murtaugh, Paul and Bell Rapids expected to be harvesting in earnest today, according to Leonard Kerbs, Amalgamated Sugar's Twin Falls district agricultural manager.

The Twin Falls plant went through a "soft-water start up" Wednesday, Kerbs said. Water was run through the pumps, evaporaters and other equipment that handle the sliced beets.

"Everything will be primed, waiting for the beets," Kerbs said, the first of which should begin the trip through the plant at 8 a.m.

The Twin Falls plant will process about 580,000 tons of beets before the expected end of the processing season in mid-February.

The plant should be running at near full production Friday and remain there for the rest of the season — known in company jargon as a campaign — unless bad weather stops the beet harvest.

Monday will be the key, Kerbs says. If the weather is good through the weekend, enough beets will be harvested to keep the plant going as the harvest is completed. If the weather is bad, the beet supply will begin running low. It will be his job to find places where the weather was less severe so beets can be harvested to keep the factory going.

SNRA nears decision on Galena expansion

KETCHUM — Sawtooth National Recreation Area officials will decide within two weeks whether to approve a controversial proposal that would expand the Galena Lodge ski-touring resort.

Dave Baumgartner, the SNRA Wood River zone manager, says the decision will include action on the application filed by Norman Fuller.

Fuller has proposed building new facilities on the west side of U.S. 75, including a three-story lodge with accommodations in various price ranges.

In addition, the SNRA will issue "refined" criteria that any expansion proposal must meet, and it will determine what should be done with facilities that now exist on the east side of the highway.

Baumgartner said the SNRA heard from 285 people on the expansion proposal.

"Almost everyone we heard from recognized the need to have some kind of facility at Galena that would provide various services to the area's users," he says. "However, a great deal of concern was expressed about the size and scope of the current proposal."

A group of Ketchum-area residents have said the proposed lodge exceeds the limits of the county's comprehensive plan and violates provisions restricting commercial development along U.S. 75.

During the past six weeks, the Forest Service has received 15 letters, including a petition, and 21 telephone calls on the issue, Baumgartner says.

Stresses his own problem-solving skills

Batt defends Evans over comic book

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

CAMPAIGN '82 Statewide races

TWIN FALLS — Idaho needs a problem-solver in the Statehouse to help guide the state to economic recovery, says Lt. Gov. Phil Batt.

And to show his credentials for the job, the GOP gubernatorial nominee detailed his record as an innovator and negotiator in the Legislature and in farming — while speaking Wednesday to the Twin Falls Rotary Club.

Responding to a comment from the audience, Batt also denied allegations that he could have stopped publication of a comic book that attacked Gov. John Evans. But he acknowledged that the booklet had caused some damage to his campaign.

"I decry the tactic," Batt said of the comic book, "but if I called them (BRIMSTONE, a Caldwell group heading the comic-book drive) and told them to shut if off, it would have appeared as if I was some type of an adviser.

"From what I know, Vern Hinkle and his BRIMSTONE group probably would not have stopped if I'd asked them, anyway," Batt said later in an interview with The Times-News.

"Personally, I wish we could get outside political-action committees like this totally out of the election process. The candidates are plenty able to point out their differences, without outside groups jumping in with negative campaign tactics.

"There are relevant issues discussed in the book, but what I object to is painting the governor as dishonest and as a tool of labor," he said. "While he is close to labor, he has not been bought by them, and he's not a puppet on a string."

Despite those few kind words for his opponent, the 55-year-old Wilder farmer was adamant about his qualifications for governor.

"It's true that we'll have to wait for the national economy to turn around before we see much relief in industries like forest products, but there are things I believe I can do with my experience to help us here in Idaho."

For starters, Batt said, the economic mix — types of businesses and enterprises — is too narrow in Idaho.

"But because of the anti-business attitude we've had in the Statehouse for some time now, growth from incoming businesses has been discouraged," he said.

LT. GOV. PHIL BATT
Promotes his qualifications

As an example, Batt cited Evans' veto two years ago of an investment tax-credit bill — one quite similar to the law passed this year by the Legislature and signed by the governor.

"At the time of his earlier veto, the incumbent said we wouldn't be able to handle the growth it would cause," Batt said. "But if you tell that to all the out-of-work people we have today, I wonder how much growth they feel we could have handled two years ago?"

Batt said that he can attract businesses and encourage economic growth because of his experience at bringing together opposing sides to solve problems, both in state government and in business.

During the late 1960s, Batt was instrumental in developing Idaho's Farm Labor Bargaining Act and Civil Rights Act. The labor negotiations resulted in disbanding picketing farm workers, and the Civil Rights Act formed the foundation of the Idaho Human Rights Commission.

Batt also discussed his successful efforts at bringing new crops to Idaho, including hops and barley for the Coors brewing company. Both crops were first tested with marginal success on Batt's farm in Canyon County. Later, he helped introduce the crops to other parts of the state, including the now widespread barley cultivation found in the Burley-Rupert area.

"And just like my experience with the crops, new markets are available to us right now for growing produce for the Campbell Soup Co. We should be going after that work," he said.

$500 offered for identity of tire-slashing vandals

TWIN FALLS — A $500 reward has been offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons responsible for the slashing of 45 tires along Addison Avenue West in Twin Falls on Monday night.

Wednesday, the number of victims of the tire-slashing spree increased to seven. Jay LaJeunesse, of 896 Rosewood Drive, told police that someone slashed one tire on his vehicle while it was parked at Baker Enterprises, 412 Addison Ave. W., the scene of several tire-slashings.

Four businesses and two individuals reported damage to their property Tuesday. All of the damage, estimated at $3,913, occurred between 10:30 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday.

Lt. Jim Kistler said the Police Department has uncovered no leads into the case.

"But we hope this $500 will turn up some (leads)," he said.

The reward will be handled through the Twin Falls Crime Stoppers office. Persons with information should contact Kistler at 733-0860.

Businesses along Addison Avenue West contributed to the reward fund in an effort to "get this stopped," said Elaine Stubbs, the manager of Cal-Gas, 438 Addison Ave. W., where $1,400 in damage was reported.

Sjogren murder case

Long-delayed trial postponed again

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The delay-plagued Jon Sjogren murder case has been postponed again.

Judge Daniel Meehl, of the Fifth District Court, has postponed Sjogren's Oct. 13 trial at the request of his defense lawyer, Mike Walz.

Walz contended Monday that he could not prepare an adequate defense in the week remaining before Sjogren's scheduled trial.

No date for a new trial has been set.

Also postponed were arguments on a key defense motion that, if successful, would keep from the jury the 29-year-old defendant's previous guilty plea.

Walz's postponement motion was expected ever since Sjogren fired his second lawyer, assistant public defender Mike Powers, on Sept. 20.

Powers was appointed to the case after Sjogren fired his first lawyer, Greg Fuller of Jerome. Powers' appointment also came within weeks of a July 6 trial date for Sjogren and, as such, resulted in a postponement.

The prosecution did not oppose the latest delay, and in fact, they had prepared for it by double booking another trial — that of 30-year-old Arthur Davis — for the Oct. 13 court schedule. However, that trial also may be delayed.

Sjogren, who remained in the county jail Wednesday, has been in custody since his May 29, 1981, arrest for the May 26, 1981, murder of 61-year-old Donna Hartley Smith of Twin Falls.

The prosecution contends that Sjogren strangled the woman with a telephone cord.

Sjogren initially pleaded guilty to second-degree murder as part of a plea-bargain agreement. But he withdrew that plea after Prosecutor Harry DeHaan recommended a fixed, 50-year prison term.

DeHaan retaliated by re-filing the original first-degree murder charge against Sjogren.

This newest delay probably means that a new lawyer will handle the case, since Walz is scheduled to leave office on Oct. 21. At that point, Powers, who will become the chief public defender, will decide who will represent Sjogren in court, Walz said.

Meehl's decision also delayed arguments on a defense motion that would keep a jury from learning about the following:

- Sjogren's prior criminal record.
- Incidents "which may, in any manner, indicate that he has been involved in fights, assaults, robberies or other related matters."
- Sjogren's prior guilty plea, and any of Sjogren's written or oral statements concerning that guilty plea.

The agreement to delay Sjogren's trial was in marked contrast to deputy prosecutor Kandace Kemp's efforts to secure a delay in the trial of Davis, who is charged with selling marijuana.

Kemp said a delay was required because a key witness in the case, police Lt. Detective Don Walden, would not be available to testify during the trial dates.

Powers, representing the defendant, opposed the motion. He noted that the prosecution already had obtained a one-week delay in the trial for the same reasons.

Meehl took the request under advisement, but he indicated that the prosecution may have to pay a price in the form of a release for Davis if they want the trial delayed. Davis remained in the county jail Wednesday, in lieu of $3,000 bond.

He is charged with selling 126.2 grams of marijuana to a state Bureau of Narcotics informant for $125 on March 9.

Prosecutors also have filed an additional charge against Davis, alleging that he is an habitual offender, in view of three prior felony convictions. The additional charge carries a penalty of five years to life imprisonment.

The charge alleges that Davis's prior record includes a Jan. 4, 1978, conviction for selling marijuana in Bonneville County; a March 30, 1979, conviction for possession of a controlled substance in Cassia County; and an April 4, 1980, conviction on a charge of infamous crime against nature in Ada County.

Judge denies Twin Falls man's probation plea

TWIN FALLS — A 22-year-old Twin Falls man's bid for freedom ended in failure Monday, when he was ordered to serve out a two-year prison sentence.

The defendant, Lee Lukenbill, of 228 Ramage St., has served four months of a two-year prison sentence, imposed for a conviction on a charge of being an accessory to conspiracy to commit extortion.

He sought an early release in order to seek alcohol-abuse treatment at the Magic Valley Alcoholic Recovery Center. But Judge Daniel Meehl agreed with deputy prosecutor Kandace Kemp that Lukenbill, who was sent to prison after he violated a two-year probation, had run out of second-chances.

In another case, Meehl overruled prosecutors and the Idaho Division of Probation and Parole by placing 33-year-old Leslie Allen Lindsay of Twin Falls on a three-year probation.

Prosecutors had sought to place the man, who earlier this year pleaded guilty to first-degree burglary, in the North Idaho Correctional Institute at Cottonwood for 120 days.

In making his decision, Meehl took into account the defendant's military background, which included seven Bronze Stars and two Air Medals for service during the Vietnam War.

"You've given society something that many people that come before the court have not given," Meehl said.

In other Fifth District Court cases Monday:

- Meehl placed 19-year-old Richard Allen Jones of Wendell on a five-year withheld judgment, in lieu of five-year suspended sentence, imposed for a grand theft conviction.

Jones had admitted participating in a Jan. 3 theft of snowmobiles and a trailer from Gem Equipment Co., off Kimberly Road in Twin Falls.

- Meehl placed 23-year-old Susan Carson of Twin Falls on a two-year withheld judgment. The woman admitted forging a $277 check to Osco Drug, 705 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., on April 23.

- Mark Broner, 20, of Kimberly, pleaded guilty to a charge that he wrote a $25 check to The Alley, 121 Fourth Ave. S., when his checking account had been closed. The offense carries a maximum punishment of three years imprisonment. Meehl ordered a presentence investigation and continued the defendant's release on $1,500 bond.

- Ken Courtney, 44, of 356 Madrin St. in Twin Falls, pleaded guilty to a charge that he issued a bad $10 check to Smith's Food King, 1913 Addison Ave. E., on Dec. 20, 1981. Meehl ordered a presentence investigation and continued the defendant's release without bond.

Jerome County settles false-arrest suit

JEROME — A settlement of $3,000 was approved Monday by the Jerome County commission to end a lawsuit that began in 1976.

The commissioners agreed to pay the settlement, although they continue to maintain innocence in the action brought against Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall. Hall was charged with making a false arrest, along with a Burley police officer and the city of Burley, after he returned a man from North Dakota to face charges in Jerome and Burley.

Edward Williams, then about 30, alleged that officers arrested and brought back the wrong man, in connection with stolen and forged checks in Jerome County and several other charges in Cassia County.

"I'm sorry they decided to pay off," Hall said Tuesday. "I didn't do anything wrong, and I think we could prove that. Edwards signed extradition papers and willingly returned to Idaho to face the charges."

Edwards was arrested in North Dakota in September 1976, and Hall went there to return him to Jerome.

Later, he was acquitted of the charge and returned to North Dakota, where he filed a $1 million damage suit, charging that Idaho authorities had arrested the wrong man.

Attorney Eugene Fredericksen, who represented Jerome County, agreed with Hall that he could undoubtedly prove his innocence, but he told the county it would no doubt cost more than $3,000 to do so.

RUPERT — Ollive Alameda Anchano, 85, of Rupert, died Monday at the Minidoka Memorial Hospital.

Born Jan. 11, 1897, in Soda Springs, she moved to Shelley and attended schools in the Preston area. She married Alvin Sibbett on April 6, 1917, and he died. She moved to Salt Lake City, where she married Joe Anchano on Feb. 24, 1936. They moved to Rupert in 1938, where she had since resided. Mr. Anchano died in 1975.

She attended the Seamstress School in Idaho Falls and was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Surviving are: three sons, Delmar Sibbett of Rupert, Dale Sibbett of Burley and Darlo Sibbett of Sacramento, Calif.; three brothers, George Hansen and Chris Hansen, both of Shelley, and Pete Hansen of Salmon; 12 grandchildren; 18 great-grandchildren; and three great-great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by a great-grandson.

The service will be conducted Tuesday at 2 p.m. at the Hansen Mortuary Chapel in Rupert with Bishop Arvin Hansen officiating. Burial will be in the Rupert Cemetery. Friends may call at the mortuary Monday afternoon and evening and prior to the service on Tuesday.

Charles L. Fuqua

GOODING — Charles L. Fuqua, 64, of Gooding, died Monday night near Grangeville.

Born April 1, 1918, in Steele City, Neb., where he was reared and educated, he served with the Marines during World War II. He married Pearl Heckbarth on Oct. 20, 1945, in Marysville, Kan. They farmed in Endicott, Neb., before moving to Gooding in 1955, where he worked as a carpenter.

He was a member of the Gooding Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion Post. He was a member of the Gooding Horseshoe Club and the Gooding Men's Bowling League.

Surviving are: his wife of Gooding; two sons, Frank Fuqua of King Hill and Brad Fuqua of Nampa; two daughters, Sandy Williams of Gooding and Brenda Low of Shoshone; three brothers, George Fuqua and Tom Fuqua, both of Gooding, and Fay Fuqua of Wendell; and a sister, Neva Graff of Steele City.

The funeral will be held Friday at 2 p.m. in the Gooding First Christian Church with the Rev. Harold Hake officiating. Burial will be in the Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding.

Friends may call at Demaray's Gooding Chapel today from 1 to 8 p.m.

Craig Thomas Cheesman

TWIN FALLS — Craig Thomas Cheesman, 29, of Roseburg, Ore., formerly of Twin Falls and Murtaugh, died Saturday in an automobile accident near Roseburg.

He was born in 1953 in Twin Falls.

Surviving are: his mother, Helen Marie Cheesman of Roseburg; two children, Jonathan and Carmen Cheesman, both of Roseburg; and two brothers. His father died about 10 years ago.

The graveside service will be held today at 2 p.m. in Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Naomi Glorfield

BURLEY — Naomi Glorfield, 83, of Burley, died Wednesday at Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley.

Born March 25, 1899, at Rockland, she attended Rockland schools and served a mission in Maine for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. She married Fred Glorfield on Dec. 2, 1922, in Pocatello. They lived in the Heglar-Rockland area until moving to Burley in 1957, where she had resided since.

She served in the Relief Society presidency, the Primary presidency, as Primary and Sunday School teacher and as Mutual Improvement Association president.

Surviving are: her husband, a son, Grant Glorfield, and a daughter, Twylla Hunt, all of Burley. She was preceded in death by an infant son and 10 brothers and sisters.

The funeral will be held Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Mormon Chapel in Rockland. Burial will be in the Valley View Cemetery in Rockland.

Friends may call at the Payne Mortuary in Burley Friday afternoon and evening and at the church in Rockland on Saturday one hour prior to the service.

The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to the Primary Children's Medical Center in Salt Lake City.

Mary B. Hudelson

TWIN FALLS — Mary B. Hudelson, 85, of Twin Falls, died Wednesday in Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Born April 4, 1897, in Morgantown, W. Va., she married Leonard W. Hudelson on Dec. 11, 1918, in Morgantown. They moved to the Salmon tract, where she resided until her death. Her husband died on March 5, 1981.

Surviving are: a son, Ellis Hudelson of Twin Falls; a daughter, Lenora Bickford of Gooding; 11 grandchildren; 21 great-grandchildren; and a brother, Don Sutton of Nalcrest, Fla. She was preceded in death, in addition to her husband, by a son, a sister and four brothers.

The funeral will be held Saturday at 11 a.m. at White Mortuary with the Rev. Sheldon Slagel officiating. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Park.

Friends may call at the mortuary this afternoon, Friday, and until 10 a.m. on Saturday.

The family suggests that memorial contributions may be made to the Heart Fund.

Valley-gram

Travel panelist named

SUN VALLEY — Charles G. "Chuck" Webb, the assistant general manager of the Sun Valley Co., has been named to the Idaho Travel Committee.

He is the Magic Valley's representative on the committee.

The committee distributes money to fund tourist-promotion activities by local chambers of commerce and regional travel committees. The money is raised through a 2 percent tax on hotel and motel room rentals. Half the funds are used by the state for general promotions of Idaho; the other half goes for local and regional promotions.

Webb, a Hazelton native, has worked for the Sun Valley Co. since 1976.

Sun knocks out cable

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Cablevision subscribers may be noticing a phenomenon called "sun outages."

A temporary loss of signal on the Nickelodeon, CNN, WTBS, CBN, ESPN, HBO and Showtime channels is occurring due to interference from the sun.

Twice a year, the revolution of the Earth around the sun causes the sun to be directly behind the satellite that transmits the signals of these stations for a few minutes each day. During that time, the Cablevision receiving dish will receive both the energy transmitted from the satellite and from the sun behind it. The result is a temporary decrease in the signal.

The outages will be noticeable until Oct 11. Each satellite-receiving dish is affected differently, but generally the outages will occur between 1:30 and 2 p.m.

The next encounter with the sun will take place in early March.

ICL schedules concert

BOISE — Four Idaho musical groups are scheduled to perform at a "Benefit for Idaho" concert, sponsored by the Idaho Conservation League, on Friday, Oct. 29, at the Boise Riverside Red Lion Inn.

Whitewater, the Braun Brothers, Swank and Strickland, and Idaho Bluegrass Special will appear on stage, starting at 9 p.m. A multiple-image slide show on Idaho wilderness areas will be shown during intermission.

The concert will be preceded by a dinner, with a cocktail hour starting at 6 p.m. Framed photographs and a wilderness-expedition trip will be auctioned during the event, according to organizers.

Tickets are $30 for the dinner-concert, and $10 for the concert alone. Both are tax-deductible. Advance tickets are available from the ICL, Box 844, Boise, 83701.

Ranger review planned

TWIN FALLS — Sawtooth National Forest officials will conduct a review before determining how to fill the vacant position of the Ketchum District ranger.

Bert Webster, the acting forest supervisor, said funding decreases have prompted the forest to carefully review every opening. Among the options being considered is a shift of responsibilities between the Ketchum district and the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

A group of employees from various forest levels will conduct the review during the next two months, according to Webster. The results of the study will be presented to incoming supervisor Ron Stoleson for a decision.

Jerry Davis, the previous Ketchum ranger, transferred last month to head the Twin Falls District, after the retirement of Joe Frazier from that position.

Webster said persons with comments or suggestions about the vacancy should contact him, acting Ketchum ranger Mark Johnson, or Allan Ashton, the SNRA superintendent.

Studded tires permitted

TWIN FALLS — Idaho drivers can begin mounting studded tires on their cars in preparation for another cold, snowy winter.

Studded tires are permitted in Idaho from Oct. 1 through April 15. Although state law does not require studs on any particular roads, signs are used to advise drivers that studs or chains are recommended on some roads under certain conditions.

Schools set open house

FILER — An open house will be held this Monday, Oct. 11, at the Filer elementary and junior high schools.

Parents and citizens are invited to tour the schools and visit with teachers and administrators from 7 to 9 p.m.

Home economist arrives

JEROME — Fay Aanerud, formerly of Bingham County, became the new Jerome County home economist Monday.

She will fill the post that has been vacant since June, when Cyndi Paulos resigned.

Aanerud spent the past four years in Blackfoot before accepting an offer from the University of Idaho Extension Service to transfer to the Jerome County position.

A native of North Dakota, she graduated from North Dakota State University and did graduate work at Texas Women's University in Denton, Texas.

"I think I am going to like Jerome, although I haven't had time to see much of the area yet," she says.

Although headquartered in Jerome, Aanerud will assist in Elmore and Gooding counties.

School overcrowding has a cost

Educators swamped with kids

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Before students were settled behind their desks, it was already a tough year for school administrators.

The problems of Magic Valley school officials, scrambling to meet spiraling enrollments, have been compounded by uncertain state funding.

Despite a national trend of decreasing numbers of school-age children, Magic Valley districts are continuing to see stable and often increasing enrollments — particularly in the lower grades.

Since 1970, public-school enrollment has dropped by almost 4 million children, nationwide. The cause is attributed mainly to a decline in the birth rate.

Smaller families, combined with a population relocation to the South and West, have reduced school enrollments in older urban areas drastically.

Idaho, as a Western state, has been a recipient, to some degree, of the continental migration, however, boosting enrollment figures. But to a larger extent, the Magic's Valley's enrollment growth could be attributed to its agricultural-based economy, which has resisted the national trend of limiting family sizes.

In the past three years, the one-two punch of migration to the West, combined with high birth rates, has hit school districts like Twin Falls hard.

Last year, enrollment increases pushed three Twin Falls elementaries onto the state's "advised" accreditation list, due to problems of overcrowding. A citizens ad-hoc committee, studying the building needs of the district, reported last spring that the district is years overdue for a new elementary school and expanded support facilities.

According to Superintendent James Sawin, the district already has more than enough students to fill a new grade school. Many of those students now are housed in portable classroom units.

In September, elementary enrollment seemed to gain momentum, as numbers jumped even beyond the increase that officials had expected, pushing classroom sizes to the limit and forcing the Twin Falls district to hire three new teachers and shift kindergartens between buildings.

To catch up with its runaway enrollment, Twin Falls will ask voters to approve a $3.5 million bond issue in the next few months to build a new elementary school and expand its physical-education facilities.

School districts in Minidoka, Jerome and Blaine counties also continue to suffer the effects of an influx of gradeschoolers over the past few years. In Minidoka, the district's elementary enrollment is up by almost 100 students.

Classes have been shifted to relieve the pressure there, and an older elementary school has been reopened to absorb the overflow. But Minidoka officials also feel they must go to the voters for a bond issue later this year to build additional facilities.

The Minidoka administration hopes to pass a bond issue that will provide a new elementary school in Rupert and additions to schools in Paul and Heyburn, according to Floyd Merrill, the district's assistant superintendent.

Blaine County also has been feeling the pressure at the elementary level — particularly in Bellevue — and at Wood River Junior High School, says Superintendent Dick Jones.

That district has leased three mobile classroom units in the past two years to relieve its bloated elementary enrollment.

Throughout the state this year, administrative woes have been compounded by the unsettled status of already declining state funding for education.

When Gov. John Evans imposed an 8.5 percent holdback on state government agencies this summer, he chose not to extend it to the public schools, which are insulated against losing funds under such conditions by a law that requires automatic property-tax increases. Evans left the question to the Legislature.

But since the governor didn't impose the holdback before the second week in September, the "safety-valve" property-tax increase — if triggered by the Legislature — cannot provide the extra tax income before late December 1983.

School districts, which already have signed contracts with suppliers and teachers, somehow will have to make ends meet next spring without the additional property-tax money.

Beyond that immediate catastrophe, many school administrators fear that a climate of see-sawing property-tax rates will make future bond issues and override levies unpalatable to the voters.

One of the few ways out of the problem, school officials say, is for the state to pass an increase in the sales tax, with the additional revenue being earmarked for education. Such a measure would forestall any shortage in school funding and head off an automatic property-tax increase, they say.

Multi-county districts hang up levies

Jerome County held hostage by tax battle

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
and MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writers

JEROME — Jerome County officials may be forced to borrow operating cash as a result of the dispute between the state Tax Commission and two of Jerome's neighboring counties.

Six counties, including Twin Falls and Gooding counties, are parties to a lawsuit currently pending before the Idaho Supreme Court over property-tax assessments.

Jerome County is not involved in the dispute. But the county's property-tax revenues are being held hostage by the battle because some taxing districts in the counties fighting the Tax Commission's orders to boost the assessments of some residential properties overlap into Jerome County.

Those taxing entities include school districts and the College of Southern Idaho district, which overlaps in Jerome, Twin Falls and Gooding counties.

State Tax Commission officials say the increases are required to equalize property-tax rates. The dissident county officials contend the state agency is in error, and that it has usurped the constitutional powers of county assessors and commissioners.

One side effect of the battle has been to freeze the tax-collection process. The state agency must certify property-tax levies before the counties can send out tax notices.

State Tax Commission officials have held off certifying levies in the six counties directly involved and in those counties affected by the dispute, such as Jerome County, until the dispute is resolved. There's no indication when that might happen, however.

The Supreme Court has not scheduled arguments in the case, and the tax-collection process is already one month behind, raising the possibility that taxes will not be collected on time. By law, property taxes are due by Dec. 20.

As such, Jerome County may have to register warrants or issue tax-anticipation notes, county officials were told Monday by county Auditor Glenda Belk. While such a move would mean paying interest on the money, Belk told the Jerome County commissioners that that would be the only way to provide the cash flow needed to operate the county.

County Assessor William Kersey also told the commissioners Monday that while the Idaho Tax Commission has no complaints with Jerome's levies and assessment appraisals, the commission has said that the levies will not be approved until the issue is settled with neighboring Twin Falls and Gooding counties.

Jerome County officials have been assessing property at full market value for three years, he said. But in the overlapping districts, where other counties are below market value, Jerome County taxpayers are paying more than their share, Kersey said.

Mayor says airport project will aid Buhl economy

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — There is "no doubt" that the expansion and improvement of Buhl's airport will benefit local business and attract new business, says Mayor Jim Barker.

"It's just like any other form of transportation" that boosts trade by making a business community more accessible, he says.

Last week, city officials signed a grant agreement with the Federal Aviation Administration for more than $680,000 to complete the reconstruction phase of the municipal airport.

The first draw on the federal grant, which the city hopes to receive soon, will be used to complete the purchase of 38 acres of land to extend the existing runway from 2,660 feet to 3,900 feet.

Another $42,279 already had been generated through airport users' fees and gasoline taxes to partially pay for the additional land and the design phase of the airport improvements.

The entire runway, including the present airstrip, which is grass, will be paved, along with the aircraft tie-down area, vehicle parking lot and access road. The lighting for night landings also will be improved.

Construction should start by spring.

Once "we can fly more planes in here," it will result in "more commerce and better service for business people," Barker says.

Rupert clarifies uses of WPPSS rate fund

By PAT MARCANTONIO

Mini-Cassia

RUPERT — City Council approved a resolution Tuesday that will earmark all interest earned on Rupert's WPPSS electric fund to remain in that fund and not be transferred to the city's general fund.

The fund was created earlier this year to hold money for anticipated payments to the Washington Public Power Supply System, for the termination costs involved with two abandoned nuclear-power plants.

In January, the city began collecting funds generated by a 14 percent increase in municipal electric rates. And as of Oct. 1, a 40 percent increase went into effect to generate more funds for the expected payments to WPPSS. That increase, added to increases associated with the higher costs the city is paying for the power it purchases from the federal Bonneville Power Administration, amounted to a total electric rate hike for Rupert residents of 76 percent.

Rupert and 87 other Northwest cities and utilities contracted for a share of two WPPSS power plants that have been terminated, because of financing problems and a lack of demand for electricity that would have been produced. No payments have been made to WPPSS yet, but city officials decided it was prudent to collect the funds in case the city must make the payments in the future.

Several court actions are under way that might abrogate the city's responsibilities to make the payments.

Councilman Dwinelle Allred described the resolution adopted Tuesday as a "housekeeping" measure.

The resolution also says that the funds accumulated in the WPPSS electric fund after Oct. 1 shall be returned to ratepayers if they are not needed to meet the WPPSS liability. However, before the funds would be returned, administrative costs would be deducted.

The administrative expenses could include the cost of hiring help to refund any surplus back to the ratepayers, said Allred, who added that the job could be quite complicated. The resolution also says that any excess interest from the fund will be returned to the ratepayers who contributed revenue for the fund.

But the resolution also states that the city shall not be obligated to return any of the funds until the city is absolved fully of its debt to WPPSS.

"If there is any surplus, we want it to go back to the people who paid it," Allred said. At no time did council have any intention of using the interest for anything more than the WPPSS electric fund, he said.

In other WPPSS-related business, council voted to ask the city's WPPSS board representative to reject the proposed budget for the two terminated plants. Among other items, the budget contains proposed payments to the bondholders, termination payments from the participants and lawyers' fees for a current WPPSS-related court case in the state of Washington.

In a letter to WPPSS from Rupert's attorneys in Seattle, the projected budget was rejected because the lawyers claimed that the participants had no authority to enter into the original contracts, according to Don Chisholm, the Rupert municipal lawyer. A case in Oregon — where a judge recently ruled that a utility board had no authority to sign the WPPSS agreement — was cited in the letter.

The WPPSS board will meet Oct. 7 to discuss the budget, Chisholm said.

He also asked council to consider declining from further representation on the WPPSS board or in other WPPSS-related business. Chisholm said that in the pending litigation, the city may take the position it had no authority to participate in the WPPSS nuclear-plant projects, and that it would be contradictory for the city to take part in WPPSS business as a participant on the power company's board.

In other council action, the city approved an agreement with the federal Bureau of Reclamation for a 10-year lease of 600 acres of land near the city's waste-treatment plant to dump treated effluent water.

The city will lease the land to farmers under certain stipulations, according to Dave Gangwer, from the bureau's Boise office.

The bureau will begin processing the lease application, Gangwer said.

The city has asked for state health department approval before the land is opened for hunting purposes. City officials are worried about any health dangers from the waste water.

Gangwer said that he had verbal confirmation from health officials that there would be no problem because the effluent is treated, but he will obtain written confirmation.

Hagerman businessmen charge that police protection is poor

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

The North Side

HAGERMAN — Owners of businesses in Hagerman that are open late in the evenings have requested additional police protection.

At the Hagerman City Council meeting on Tuesday, Bart Silver, the owner of the Motor Inn, said local businesses are entitled to more protection during evening hours.

"I'm not trying to be critical," Silver said, but "I feel if there are four or five places open, somebody should be around all the time."

On Sept. 24, the Motor Inn was robbed at about 9:30 p.m. by two men from Fairfield. Pat Stoney, a clerk working alone, was struck on the head with a pistol.

Although the two men were apprehended later, Silver claimed that the crime might have been prevented if a patrolman had stopped for gas, driven through and shined some lights in the store, or walked in for a periodic check during the hour the two burglars were in the store.

"I still think that has some effect on people," he said. "They don't know when you're going to be there."

He also suggested that a fund-raising event be held to provide payment for a night watchman.

Rose Schwanz, the owner of the Quik Stop, said that she has a gun at her store now, because she and other women who work alone in Hagerman at night no longer feel safe.

Robert Aja, the Gooding County sheriff, told council that three county deputies include Hagerman as part of their regular night-time patrol, while resident Deputy Steve Lawrason, although still living in Bliss, patrols the city "a whole lot more," than his required 40 hours a week.

"I've swung through your place a lot of times," he told Schwanz.

The sheriff advised merchants to cooperate with robbers and concentrate on getting their descriptions and the license-plate numbers of their vehicles, if possible.

Lawrason said that he soon will have a portable radio, which will allow him to leave his car to enter stores more often.

Councilman Merle Owsley noted that the Motor Inn robbery was only the second armed robbery in Hagerman in 40 years.

Dean Smart, the owner of a laundry-sandwich shop that is scheduled to open this month, complimented the police coverage in Hagerman, saying it was better than that of Portland or Meridian, where he has lived. He suggested the business owners meet with Aja and Lawrason to organize "a better system."

Aja agreed to meet with the owners at their convenience.

In other business Tuesday night:

• Ron Fager, of C&R Sanitation, asked for a trash-collection franchise for residential garbage.

Fager requested that City Hall bill for the collection, along with the water and sewer billing. His company then would pay the city for billing expenses, he said.

The franchise would require all city residents to pay the trash-collection fee, which Fager estimated would not be more than $4.50 per month.

However, there could be exceptions made for those who do not want his service, said Fager, who is now collecting residential trash on a private basis for $7 per month.

Mayor Karen Yarbrough suggested that a survey be taken to determine how many of the 300 households within the city limits would favor the proposal.

• Since councilmen Dave Beutler and Jim Maxwell were not present, council lacked a quorum and had to postpone regular city business. A special meeting was set for next Tuesday, Oct. 12, at 7 p.m., when a quorum will be possible. The regular meeting scheduled for Oct. 19 will be canceled.

Filer OKs employee reviews

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

West End Twin Falls

FILER — A new policy to evaluate the performance of city employees was adopted Tuesday night by Filer City Council.

Under the policy, new employees who are on a year's probation will be evaluated every three months by their department heads. After a year of employment, they will be evaluated every six months.

Council voted in favor of the "performance report" at the recommendation of Mayor Perry Dyke, who proposed that city employees' habits and abilities should be reviewed.

The review "keeps them up-to-date on how well they're doing. Then, they can see where their shortcomings are," the mayor said.

"We might be able to head off some problems we've had in the past," Councilman Ron Stokesberry added.

In other business:

• The mayor said that the zoning board and City Council have posted a notice to residents that the building permit ordinance will be strictly enforced in the future. If any citizen begins building a structure before obtaining a building permit, they will be fined $100 per day for every day the violation continues, he said.

• The wives of three Filer police officers were denied their request that officers on duty be able to use a police car at the end of their shift to pick up the next officer on duty, who would then drive the first officer home.

Only Councilwoman Wanda Shaffer, who is the police commissioner, voted in favor of the proposal. "I feel it is official city business," she said.

Prior to Oct. 1, policemen were allowed to exchange the police car between shifts, but a new policy has gone into effect that requires the officers to provide their own transportation to work.

Annette Williams, whose husband is a policeman, said "officers are still serving the community" when they drive to each other's homes, which are all within a mile radius of the Police Department.

Another wife, Brenda Dudley, said that her husband now drives their only car to work, and she does not have it for emergencies.

But Councilman Richard Schweitzer said, "If you give one department this service, you have to give every department this service."

• Council told police Chief Gary Roehl that he does not have to fulfill any future requests by the Twin Falls Sheriff's Department to escort local bank employees to Twin Falls.

Roehl recently was dispatched by the sheriff's office to escort Idaho First National Bank employees in Filer to Twin Falls because the sheriff's office was unable to do it.

• Former Councilman Lee Alexander purchased a former Filer police car.

Alexander submitted the only bid, $811, to buy the 1979 Ford Granada.

The car has a "Blue Book" value of $2,400 to $3,400, less a $1,200 discount because it was used as a police car, Shaffer said.

• Councilman Bob Fort advised council that he will file an insurance claim against the city for approximately $100 because a city-owned tractor hit his mother-in-law's car while it was parked in front of his house.

THANKS

To the folks of Jerome county for all the fine support and confidence you have shown me so far in my campaign.

If I am successful in my bid for re-election I promise I will continue to try to be a good commissioner for Jerome county.

Jerome takes steps to avoid illegal purchases

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — The city of Jerome is taking precautions to keep all supply purchases completely legal and above board.

A resolution to address the issue, introduced Tuesday night during the regular City Council meeting, was read but tabled for some rewording sought by council members.

"As far as our (the city's) employees are concerned, the policy is already in effect," Mayor Ralph Peters said.

If approved, the resolution would prohibit the purchase of any supplies if the sale was initiated by a telephone call.

But Councilman Glen Capps objected to the wording.

"Right now, we buy a lot of supplies as a result of telephone calls. If we need an equipment item and someone hears about it and calls us to inquire, the way this is worded, we couldn't buy it, even if the price was right," he said.

That part of the resolution will be returned to Robert Williams, the city's attorney, for rewording.

City Clerk Marilyn Bragg said the wording also would cause problems for her office, since some of the city's regular suppliers call when they have an item the city regularly uses that is being offered at a special price.

"They usually call us and tell us the item is going on sale, and we check our inventory and call them back," she said.

Other provisions of the resolution would prohibit the acceptance of any inducement for such purchases. It calls for city employees and officers making purchases to use their best discretion to ensure that the goods purchased are of the best quality and at the best price possible.

Mayor Peters said the intent of the resolution is understood by city workers, although the wording needs to be changed before it is adopted.

In other council action:

• John and Gladys Rasco, representing the Animal Protection Agency of Jerome, reported that they had collected $300 during a benefit auction Saturday to help raise funds for the Jerome dog pound.

Mrs. Rasco said the amount was not as much as had been expected, but it was enough to winterize the old pound if the new one cannot be ready before winter sets in.

Mayor Ralph Peters said the anticipated completion date is Nov. 15. Rather than spending money on the old pound, the Rascos said they would prefer to use the money for some worthwhile item for the new pound, and they will wait until mid-November before releasing it.

Tax

"This is one reason the state (Tax Commission) wants to bring all property up to the same level, so there will not be any discrepancies," he said.

But Jerome County Commissioner Russell Howell Jr. said that he could sympathize with the dissident counties.

"Many of them are complaining about the state Tax Commission's timing," he said. "They tell me the Tax Commission's orders come after most of the appraisals are completed and when there is not time to make the changes and still get out the tax notices."

Kersey agreed, adding that he has received five notices of changes in taxing procedures concerning residential property within the past three years.

"If the Tax Commission continues, they will be making county assessors nothing more than accountants," Commission Chairman Mel Grindstaff said.

Buhl looks for new treasurer

BUHL — The city of Buhl is looking for a new treasurer.

The city's treasurer for six years, Lois Henderson, resigned as of Sept. 27 for "personal reasons."

Resumes are being accepted for the position through Oct. 15, according to Mayor Jim Barker.

The main criteria for the job is that the person be able to operate a Burroughs billing machine, he said.

In the meantime, Robin Colpitts of Buhl has taken the job temporarily.

Irrigators 'OK' new law

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Water Users Association has applauded the Reclamation Act revisions recently approved by Congress, saying they will prevent the sale of about 100,000 acres of farmland in the state.

Association Director Sheri Chapman said Tuesday that the amendments approved last week to the 1902 Reclamation Act have wiped out a threat that thousands of acres of Idaho farmland would have to be sold because of the long-standing 160-acre ownership limit and other now-defunct restrictions.

The new bill increased the ownership limit to 960 acres for individuals and corporations of fewer than 25 people to receive water from reservoirs owned by the federal government.

The bill also eliminated a requirement that owners of farms covered by the Reclamation Act live on their land.

About 3.5 million acres of irrigated farmland in Idaho receive some federal water, said John Rosholt, a Twin Falls attorney who specializes in water-related cases.

Council gets members

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans has named 11 people, including three from the Magic Valley, to the state Advisory Council on Aging, and he has reappointed seven others to the panel.

New members are: Lorenza Cushman of Sagle; Clinton Dougherty and Willie Ruth Hansen, both of Filer; Bessie Lotze of Lewiston; Frances Martin of Driggs; Don McDermid of Twin Falls; Joseph Ortega of Pocatello; G.I. Scott of St. Anthony; Hilla Stapleton of Nezperce; Edwin Stevens of Boise; and Verlin Williams of Grangeville.

Reappointed council members are: Roy Brown of Desmet; Oval Caskey of Mackay; Inez Evening and Wayne Park, both of Blackfoot; Alice Hallberg of Nampa; Manuel Lopez of Burley; and John Purce of Pocatello.

Council demotes chief

PRESTON (UPI) — Preston City Council has voted in a closed session to oust police Chief Ken McCollum for carrying out "inappropriate and unnecessary" undercover investigations and allegedly harassing Preston residents.

The council, accusing McCollum of insubordination, announced its decision at its regular meeting Tuesday night. But officials said the vote was taken in a closed executive session Tuesday morning.

Mayor Richard Bowman said McCollum was told he could remain with the five-man police force as a patrolman.

In a written response to the council, McCollum requested that he be allowed to use nine days in vacation time the city owes him, to give him time to contemplate his future. The ousted chief said he would discuss the situation with his attorney and give the council his answer at the end of the vacation.

Rollover kills youth

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — A one-car rollover on Interstate 15, about 10 miles north of Idaho Falls, has claimed the life of a 16-year-old youth.

Idaho State Police officers said Michael Price of Idaho Falls died Tuesday afternoon at a local hospital of injuries he received in the mishap.

Investigators said Price was driving alone Monday afternoon in his southbound car when the vehicle apparently drifted onto the shoulder of the highway.

The driver apparently overcorrected, police said, veering the car into a median strip, then rolling it twice.

Price was thrown from the auto.

Cause of fire unknown

ISLAND PARK (UPI) — Investigators still had not determined a cause Wednesday for a fire that has destroyed a resort hotel at Island Park.

The fire erupted in the inn's kitchen during the middle of the night.

Fremont County sheriff's Deputy Burt Bates said he spent Wednesday at the scene of the blaze, which leveled the Big Springs Resort, west of Yellowstone Park.

"We haven't pinned down the cause, and we don't have any good leads yet," Bates said. He said investigators had not ruled out arson, although resort owner Lyle Peterson of Blackfoot said he doubted the fire was deliberately set.

Crews were called to the building about 2:30 a.m. Tuesday, but they were unable to put out the flames before the structure was destroyed, officials said.

Two employees were asleep upstairs when the fire broke out, but they were able to escape by breaking a window and jumping to the ground.

Deputy may face charge

CALDWELL (UPI) — Canyon County prosecutors say it might take several days to decide whether any charges will be filed against a deputy sheriff in the wounding of a Nampa man during an experiment with a bulletproof vest.

A city spokesman said Police Chief Richard Dormois was talking to Canyon County prosecutors about whether to file a complaint against Marc Smith, 29. Smith conducted the vest experiment early Sunday with the victim, Gary Acree, 21, who is in fair condition at a Caldwell hospital.

Smith was dismissed Monday for breaking six rules listed in the agency's manual of procedures.

State finances

September revenue shows gain

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Tax Commission officials said Wednesday that revenue collections improved slightly in September, compared to the previous year. But analysts are divided about whether the state's money woes are actually beginning to subside.

General-account revenue collected by the Tax Commission last month totaled nearly $24.2 million, compared to $23.7 million in September of fiscal year 1982, the agency's report said.

That was a slight improvement over August totals and marked the first time that fiscal year 1983 revenue for a single month climbed above 1982 figures, according to the report.

But John Andreason, the director of the legislative fiscal office, said the total was still well below the collection pace predicted when the state budget was adopted.

General-fund revenue in the first three months of this fiscal year added up to almost $69.7 million — down from $74.1 million at the same point last year because of delays in income-tax refund payments and sluggishness in a variety of categories, the commissioners said.

But despite the September gain, the state still is lagging 9.1 percent behind the collection pace that would be needed to meet the $425 million revenue projection made by lawmakers when they approved the budget, Andreason said.

State financial planners predicted early in the fiscal year that revenue would dip some $40 million below projections. Gov. John Evans then called for nearly $40 million in budget cuts.

Richard Slaughter, chief state economist, said Wednesday that while the September revenue figures are encouraging, it's too soon to think about amending the revenue-shortage estimate.

Note sale nets $106 million

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon announced Wednesday the state now has received $106 million as the result of a bond-sales program undertaken to ease a serious cash-flow problem.

Moon said she completed paperwork on the transaction late Tuesday in New York City and wired the money back to Boise for immediate investment until it is needed to pay state bills.

Nearly $23 million of the funds — obtained through the sale of the tax-anticipation notes — were invested in time certificates with Idaho banks, she said. Most of the remainder went into repurchase agreements with local banks and time certificates with Idaho savings and loan associations.

The rest was placed in U.S. government and agency securities, the treasurer said.

She said about $49 million of the funds will be used on Oct. 15 to pay the state's second installment to public schools.

"Varying additional amounts will be spent between then and Feb. 16, when the third installment to the public schools, around $72 million, will require whatever is left of the borrowed money," Moon said.

The Idaho Board of Examiners authorized issuance of the notes in August, when it became clear the state was facing a serious cash-flow problem due to lagging revenues.

Moody Investment Service gave the state the highest possible bond rating, keeping the interest rate on the notes at slightly under 7 percent.

The state eventually will owe a total of about $5.6 million in interest on the notes — which are due at the end of the fiscal year on June 30 — but hopes it can earn a total of about $7.6 million by investing the funds until they are needed, she said.

Head Start begins its 18th year

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Head Start, a federal program started in the 1960s Great Society era, has become one of the few social programs to escape the Reaganomics budget-cutting ax in the 1980s.

The Magic Valley Head Start program begins its 18th year this week, with an overflowing class load and a long waiting list.

This week also has been designated national Head Start Week to commemorate a program that has developed from a day-care service for low-income, 4-year-olds to a comprehensive educational service that involves the entire family.

In fact, children who participated in some of the earliest Head Start programs are now nearly old enough to become Head Start parents themselves.

Doris Fuller, the director of the Twin Falls program, says that about 196 children have enrolled in this year's Head Start programs in Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Buhl and Jerome. However, the program only has been funded for 180 students, so activities operate on a tight budget, she says.

About 60 children have been enrolled in the Twin Falls program. The children spend two mornings a week at the Head Start center at 296 Falls Ave. W., but Head Start family educators spend at least that much time in the home, working with parents, Fuller says.

Fuller says that Head Start is one of the few social programs considered "cost-effective" by the Reagan administration. Hence, its funding has not been slashed as has money for other social agencies.

The program's emphasis has shifted from providing day-care and pre-school services to teaching parenting skills to young mothers and fathers struggling with raising a child on a limited income, according to Fuller. Head Start parents also are required to participate extensively in Head Start programs, as part of the requirements for federal funding.

Herrett wants response to research findings

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

JEROME — Although the "trophy species" management plan is nearing completion, Fifth District Fish and Game Commissioner Steve Herrett isn't sure he wants to wait.

The trophy species management plan, underwhich the Idaho Fish and Game Department will outline its goals for future populations, hunting framework, etc., is rounding into shape. Following the statewide plan which was presented to Idaho hunters for elk and deer last year, the trophy species plan will be introduced through a series of regional public hearings about mid-November.

Mountain goat, bighorn sheep, moose and antelope and will all be addressed in one document while Black bear and mountain lion will be in another, said Gary Will, regional biologist for the department.

But Herrett will be pushing for one phase of the plan to be enacted at the commission meeting in Boise on Oct. 22 or, barring that, at least in place for the 1983 season.

Herrett remains upset with his fellow commissioners and some department personnel for not having an antelope "rut" hunting sabbatical this fall. It would heal an apparent disruption of the animals' social and reproductive habits.

"It's the logical thing to do, it is an easy thing to do and it makes sense," Herrett said Monday.

Herrett continues to pursue an antelope study conducted by department personnel, largely under the aegis of antelope expert Bob Autenrieth, that suggests specific use of research findings to manage "for the benefit of the species."

Autenrieth's specific recommendation asked for a two-week hiatus in the antelope season to protect and promote a "gene pool," underwhich the stronger males in the population would provide the bulk of the reproduction.

Autenrieth noted, in a presentation to the commission during a meeting in Twin Falls last spring, that harassment by hunters through the peak of the mating season had broken down the antelope's natural social structure.

He noted that part of this reproductive process was the establishment of "territories" and the recruitment of does by bucks into a family system. Through fighting, the bucks established their right to father the herd and because of that strength and continued vigilance, assured that the best of the "gene pool" perpetuated the species.

As hunters either killed these territorial bucks and/or dispersed his harems, this "survival of the fittest" ploy developed by nature has been disrupted. Autenrieth has documented breeding participation by yearling bucks, something, he said, never occurs naturally.

For that reason, he suggested an early hunt but then a closure at the peak of breeding at which time the territorial bucks would make their contribution "to the good of the species" without harassment when natural social laws would rule.

In his closing argument, Autenrieth told the commission that current practices may assure the state of huntable populations but definitely compromised the vitality of the species.

Although this suggestion seemed well received by the commission, it did not enact the plan for this fall, leaving Herrett chagrinned.

"Out of a 16 million dollar budget we eke out about $700,000 for research. This doesn't amount to much when you consider we're discussing the welfare of our wildlife resources for future years," he said.

"Then when we do come up with something like this, we don't act upon it," he said. "We come up with the research and states like Montana, Colorado, Wyoming and others immediately jump on it and put it to use but we don't."

Herrett said this foot dragging was "partly from the commission, partly from department personnel."

"There is a little personality conflict there . . . (from) some who simply don't like to spend anything on research. There are others who (over the years) have proven that they don't like change. They are and remain traditionalists," he said.

"These are the types of things I believe we are seeking when we begin this research projects. It makes no sense to me that once we find facts that can work to the advantage of the species and the Idaho hunter that we don't immediately use them," Herrett said.

"I assume that Autenrieth's plan will be on the agenda (for the Oct. 22 meeting) but if it isn't, I will see to it that it is discussed," Herrett said.

Grizz

Poachers, mishaps claimed six bears near Yellowstone during past year

JACKSON, Wyo. (UPI) — State game and fish officials say accidental shootings and poachers are taking a toll on the grizzly bears in the area around Yellowstone National Park.

Six grizzly bears have been killed in the Yellowstone National Park area in the past year; two of those were in the Jackson area in September.

State and federal wildlife officials are cooperating on programs to catch poachers, while state officials say they hope more publicity and education will reduce the number of accidental killings of grizzly bears.

Fred Herbel, Wyoming Game and Fish warden in Jackson, said Sunday officials are looking for solutions. "I think one of the problems we have now is mistaken identity," he said.

The Wyoming Game and Fish Department has a cooperative program with the U.S. Forest Service to put out posters and publications showing the physical and behavioral characteristics of a black bear and a grizzly bear.

"These are posted and made available at trailheads going into wilderness areas which grizzly bears may inhabit," Herbel said. The hope is that the agencies can "educate the public that grizzly bears are in the area and how to identify properly a grizzly bear from a black bear," he said.

Education is a good way to start, said Tom Toman, district supervisor for the department. "But it's awfully difficult to get to all the publics that enjoy the area the grizzly inhabits."

The department considered requiring a mandatory school for black bear hunters to make them familiar with identification techniques, Toman said. "I don't think that's really practical. But we're going to make a slide presentation available to anybody who would like to see it."

The department and federal agencies are also involved in a battle against poachers who sell the hides, paws, claws and gall bladders of black bears and grizzly bears illegally killed.

The bear paws and gall bladders are in demand as aphrodisiacs, and the organs can be sold for as much as $200 each on the black market. The claws are used for jewelry and the hides are used as rugs and wall hangings.

Yellowstone is one of only two remaining major habitats for grizzlies in the lower 48 states.

Breaking clay

Kokanee snagging reaches peak level

High water gives anglers bonus

JEROME — The snagging season for kokanee (redfish) in the South Fork of the Boise River is about at peak condition.

Bob Bell, regional fisheries biologist for the Idaho Fish and Game Department, said southern Idaho anglers got an expected bonus when high water washed out the department's fish trap for a day. This led to an unexpectedly large number of fishing reaching the upper river. However, the size of the run and the individual fish indicate the department will secure enough eggs from its spawning operation to keep kokanee production in the state at capacity levels.

Bell said sage grouse checking stations indicated the success of anglers who provided a peripherry bonus. On the opening weekend, the checking stations counted "about 1,500" being brought back by fishermen.

The washing out of the weir for about a 24-hour period led to the upstream escapement of 6,000 to 8,000 fish. Bell said this probably won't be critical since the department usually allows surplus fish to advance beyond the weir after the department's egg goal has been reached. The only major difference this year is that the fish are up the river earlier than usual.

The number of naturally spawned kokanee isn't expected to deviate much from normal.

"The weir was back in place by the next evening and the fish started coming back in without any slackening," Bell said. "We've already started taking eggs there and because the size of the individual fish is considerably better than last year, we're getting more eggs per female."

Bell said he expected the snagging season to last at least through the month and perhaps beyond.

"Because of the water temperatures the run was about two weeks late and last year a few fish were still moving out of the reservoir in early November. Because of that, I would expect the season to be very good through October," he said.

The fish size has remained quite constant with those in the vanguard of the run. Females were running about 12 inches in length and perhaps just under a pound to a pound. Size of the males was up considerably, ranging from 14 to 16 inches and from a pound to a pound and one-half each.

Remington 12 guage top prize

North Side DU feast set for Jerome tonight

JEROME — Sportsmen attending the annual banquet and auction of the North Side Chapter of Ducks Unlimited tonight will have an opportunity to take home a limited edition, collector shotgun.

The annual event begins at 6:30 p.m. in the Jerome Elks Lodge with a no-host social hour followed by dinner at 8 p.m., according to Charlotte Bell, association member.

In addition to the dinner, the organization will auction this year's selected gun, "The River" which is a Remington 870, 12 guage. It was specially selected by Ducks Unlimited officials as this year's collector item and fund raiser.

The auction will also feature wildlife paintings and other art work by Ducks Unlimited artist of the year, Chet Reneson. His watercolor "Hunters of the Marsh" will highlight the art auction. There will be additional works offered by H. Cobb Gilbert of Carey. A local miniter, Gilbert is also known as an award winning artist.

Last year's North Side Ducks Unlimited dinner and auction brought about $5,800 including the $1,300 paid for last year's gun offering.

Funds raised from the project will go to restore and maintain the duck breeding grounds in Canada where ducks hunted in Magic Valley originate.

Idaho has been recognized as having the largest percentage of Ducks Unlimited membership renewal in the nation with 71.2 percent of the members renewing this year, Bell said. There are 5,000 members in Idaho and about five million members nationally.

Last year these members raised $31 million through banquets, auctions and other projects. The goal this year is $37 million.

No reservations are necessary for the dinner. The cost of the banquet is $20, half of the fee goes for a one-year membership in Ducks Unlimited.

Caring for bagged game, birds a common problem

Special to The Times-News

Big game hunters and bird hunters have one problem in common — the care of game once it's bagged.

It isn't unusual for a hunter to spend days in the field hunting only to have the table quality of his game go downhill because of improper care.

Heat is a hunter's principal enemy in the care of game but it is followed closely by dirt and flies.

Some outdoor traditions actually fly in the face of good meat care. For instance, the practice of loading the kill on the fender or roof of a car or truck for the trip home exposes the meat to dirt, heat and insects.

The camp meat pole can be a problem in warm weather when game hangs for as much as a week while the hunting party uses up the remaining days allotted for the hunt.

Actually, unless it is cold enough that your hands suffer when wet, you'll have a problem with meat spoilage.

I've found that the sooner I can get meat cooled down following a hunt the better my table fare will be.

In fact, the best venison I've ever put on the table was shot at 6 a.m. and was skinned, quartered and hanging in a cold room at the meat cutter's by 8 a.m. the same day.

What happens when meat is allowed to cool slowly is that body heat, particularly in such larger animals as elk and moose, will cause meat to sour near the bone on shoulders and haunches.

To promote quick cooling, large animals should be skinned, quartered and placed in game bags as soon as possible.

Use the mesh type of bag which allows for air circulation but keeps flies and dirt off.

I've used snow banks, clear, cool creeks and snow banks. In fact, a stock tank in southern Alberta once served as a meat cooler during a hot afternoon when a mule deer could have spoiled.

Most hunters leave the hide on the animal until it is brought out of the brush to keep the meat clean.

Unfortunately, the hair of most big game animals is such a wonderful insulator that you'd just as well wrap a skinned critter in a down coat as leave the hide on.

Propping open the body cavity with sticks serves well but think how much faster the meat will cool if the carcass is skinned and hung from a tree while still warm in addition to being propped open.

When field dressing, the neck, brisket and pelvis should be split open and propped to allow better cooling.

It's wise not to plan on hanging game for more than a couple of days, even at ideal temperatures of just over freezing.

That's because there is too little fat in game meat to allow for the controlled tenderizing which results when beef or pork is hung for longer-longer periods.

One elk hunter I know is into wilderness in a big way and he was once north Idaho's most prominent member of the Sierra Club.

I remember his bragging over a beer one 80-degree day about killing his elk the day before.

I was immediately critical as I believed that anything shot in those temperatures would be carrion before it reached the locker plant.

My friend smiled, then admitted to a most un-Sierra Club approach for solving the problem.

During hot weather he hunted only near logging roads. And after bagging his elk, he skinned it, then loaded it into his air-conditioned four-wheel drive wagon for the trip home.

After ruling the temperature to "arctic," he put on his winter hat, coat and gloves and headed for town. By the time he reached the meat cutter, his game was cool and safe.

Bird hunters have similar problems but seldom realize them. Some expect birds to taste "gamey."

Because birds are small animals, it usually isn't necessary to worry about leaving as soon as possible after the kill in order to get the animal into a cold room.

But the birds should be field dressed as soon as they are killed. That means removing all organs, including the lungs and gizzard.

If you're out overnight or for more than one day, it's a good idea to pluck the bird, except for one fully-feathered wing required by law, and to put the birds on ice in a camp cooler.

Unfortunately, a few hours at a fish and game check station will convince you that's just the opposite of what most hunters really do.

Every year the bulk of birds have been shot, then put in such hot places as the back of a pickup where the sun's heat reacts with the metal to create an oven.

With either birds or big game, know where the animal is going to go once you return to town.

Having made previous arrangements with a meat cutter or locker plant operator can make the difference between allowing the meat to spoil in your garage and having your family ask you to get more venison next year.

And be sure there's room in the refridgerator for your birds as soon as they reach home. If they're to be frozen, try freezing them in water to prevent drying in cold storage.

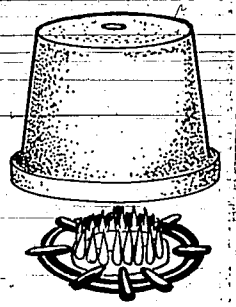
Clay pot makes excellent radiant heater



Special to The Times-News

During this fall season, when it is chilly in the mornings and after the sun goes down, but not cool enough to start up the heater in the camper or trailer, how about a radiant heater?

Purchase a new six- or eight-inch clay pot. Place the pot over a low setting on the burner and the pot will radiate plenty of heat. Remember, when using your stove, crack a vent someplace in your rig.

Spent last weekend at Blackfoot Reservoir. Now kiddies that was one wet, cold weekend. Ole partner looked like a Basset hound when I announced "We come all this way, and I plan to fish." Fish we did, trolling about a total of eight hours.

Had maybe 25 fish on, brought to boat and kissed 13. Kept one.

Most are 15 to 19 inches long, with the cutthroat running a little smaller.

While trying various flys, I recalled that old fishtale: "Dark days, dark flys," and came up with a dark red woolly worm, that I dubed "Raggedy Ann," and the darn thing worked.

The wife also had excellent luck just trolling a strung out worm.

The bank fishermen were not in evidence, so no report from that sector.

A few notes taken while attending meetings:

• By the time you read this the water has been shut off at Magic Reservoir and there will be excellent fishing below the dam.

• A few years back, when they drained Dog Creek Reservoir, they found two six-foot sturgeon.

• While attending a park board meeting . . . the battle between fishermen and water skiers progressed to the point where a bank fisherman whose line was cut at Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir last summer, watched until the guilty boat beached and then calmly dropped a large rock through the bottom.

• Swen was full of crap, when he offered advice on limits over the phone. The question was, "Can I catch five walleye, plus my limit of trout?". The right answer is yes. Sorry caller, hope you did not cut your limit short because of some bad advice.

• Experimental planting of limited numbers of fall Chinook will be made annually in Anderson Ranch Reservoir to determine whether the species is effective in curbing overpopulation of kokanee.

• Smallmouth bass were recently illegally introduced into Little Camas Reservoir and could ruin the trout fishing.

• Over half the walleye caught at Salmon Falls Reservoir caught this year were not, I repeat NOT planters. By checking scales on these fish the game department can determine natural reproduction. And more than half caught were from natural reproduction.

• Some Brown trout, up to a record-tying nine pounds have been caught on the Little Wood River this year.

• Mormon Reservoir is being considered as a prime place for stocking Brown trout. There also may be a stocking of fall chinook to determine whether this species is effective in reducing perch populations.

• "You tell em, no, you tell em." You cannot use five hooks even if it's fishing from the top of Perrine bridge. OK, kill joy, what now?

Swen is an avid Twin Falls fisherman.

Duck opener rated average

JEROME — The easy pickings of locally produced ducks has been accomplished and now it is a matter of waiting for migration to fill Magic Valley's waterways and fields.

Gary Will, biologist for the Idaho Fish and Game Department, said last weekend's opening was "about average with the harvest made up of locally produced ducks."

The department does nothing special for the duck opener, such as conducting checking stations. Most of the information comes from conservation officers who personally contact hunters and get a partial indication of the harvest through field checks.

Big game outlook appears good

JEROME — With some of the elk seasons having opened Tuesday and the bulk of the deer hunts to begin Oct. 20, the outlook for big game harvest in this area is good.

Gary Will, regional biologist for the Idaho Fish and Game Department, believes area big game herds survived the past cold, snowy winter much better than first feared.

"By and large the deer populations are in very good condition and continue to increase," Will said. "I think we remain fairly well on track with our 1981-85 management goals (to increase populations). We are forecasting a very good hunt for mule deer and we expect the same amount of hunter success as last fall."

"Our elk, as a whole, are still in fairly good shape even through we had that severe winter. We did have setbacks in some specific areas. But regionwide, our elk appear in good shape. Again we expect hunter success to be very comparable to last year."

BLM proposing new geologic rules

SHOSHONE — The Bureau of Land Management is proposing rules for collecting geologic and hobby mineral materials.

The purpose of the new regulations, according to the BLM, is to provide procedures to permit the collection of geologic and hobby mineral materials from public lands and to protect or preserve significant fossils, geologic materials and other resources on public land from degradation.

Persons or groups interested in commenting on the proposed rules can obtain copies by writing the Bureau of Land Management, P.O. Box 2B, Shoshone, ID 83352.

Pagari Bridge closed for repairs

RICHFIELD — Pagari Bridge, located on the Little Wood River six miles northeast of Richfield, has been closed by the Bureau of Land Management.

The bridge is mainly used by ranchers, hunters and fishermen.

Structural timbers in the bridge have been broken, creating a very unsafe condition according to Ervin Cowley of the BLM. The bridge will be closed until repairs can be made and plans are being made to replace the bridge next summer.

Further information can be obtained by calling Cowley at 886-2206.

Checking visitors

A visitor to Wildlife Safari in Winston, Ore., is greeted by an inquisitive Australian emu. The Wildlife Safari is celebrating its 10th anniversary Oct. 15-17. In 10 years more than 1.75 million visitors have visited the attraction which features breeding cheetahs.

Piranhas appearing in north

By TOM McNALLY
Chicago Tribune

One of the more unusual events that occurs in the world of fishing is the appearance of piranhas in America's rivers.

Piranhas are not native to any North American lakes or rivers; they appear naturally only in the warm rivers and lakes of South America, notably in Brazil, Venezuela and Columbia.

Piranhas have long fascinated many people, chiefly because the piranha has a justified reputation for ferocity, and is considered to be a killer of men and other animals. It is a fact the toothy piranha is extremely dangerous to any animal entering its waters, since the fish frequently attack in great schools any animal they can reach.

Piranhas are well equipped for their carnivorous mayhem. Their sharply pointed teeth, though comparatively small, are razor-sharp on two sides, and they are serrated, so that the teeth of the lower jaw mesh with the teeth of the upper — the way a person might clasp the fingers of two hands together.

When attacking an animal (cattle are taken by them frequently) swarming piranhas literally churn and froth the water in a wild feeding frenzy, and when attacking in numbers they can rend even a large animal to skin and bones in minutes.

In recent years, hook-and-line fishermen have caught quite a lot of piranhas in rivers and lakes of our Southern states. In south Florida, Texas and parts of the Gulf states, the weather is sufficiently mild for piranhas to survive most normal winters.

But piranhas are showing up more frequently in Northern states, too. About two summers back, a piranha weighing a couple pounds was caught by a fisherman at an Illinois Department of Conservation recreational fishing lake. Some have been caught in the Ohio River. And just the other day, a full-grown piranha was hooked and landed by an angler fishing Missouri's Big River, just south of Eureka.

Piranhas can survive the summer months in waters of the Northern states, but they can't make it through the winters. The piranha is a tropical fish, and authorities assume they get into U.S. waters now and then when some tropical fish fan — having purchased a piranha for a home aquarium — soon finds the fish too large for his tank, and so releases it in local waters.

In most states, it is a violation of the conservation laws to release any fish into state waters without official approval. Moreover, according to Missouri fishery biologist Larry Belusz, a full-grown piranha is worth about $50 on the pet market.

A few years back, I spent several weeks fishing from a houseboat on the Ariquira River, a tributary of Brazil's Amazon. The party caught peacock bass (pavon or tucanare) and other important gamefish by the hundreds, and a 12-foot anaconda (a constrictor snake) once tried to catch my fly rod popping bug, while another time a four-foot caiman (crocodile) managed to catch the bug, was hooked, boated, photographed and released. But much of the fun of that trip was watching the piranhas. Now and then, schools of them would tear the river apart, and they'd tear up lures, streamer flies and popping bugs.

Steelhead run at a fast pace

Special to The Times-News

JEROME — The steelhead run into Idaho has already reached the upper Salmon River in the vicinity of North Fork and fishermen have been reporting good catches throughout the lower Salmon and Clearwater Rivers.

It appears the run may reach 55,000 fish over Ice Harbor Dam of which an estimated 25,000 will be group "A" fish that normally migrate into the Salmon River. The cooler water temperatures this fall have allowed the fish to migrate into Idaho at a much faster pace than usual.

The Indian fishery in the lower Columbia River took an estimated 5,000-6,000 fish rather than the 20,000 steelhead taken in past years. This has also resulted in a greater return to Idaho. This was a result of negotiation with the tribes to avoid setting salmon season that also took large numbers of steelhead. Idaho conservation officers are helping with enforcement of the anadromous fishery in the Columbia River in cooperation with Oregon and Washington.

The steelhead season on the main Salmon River from its mouth upstream to the mouth of the East Fork of the Salmon River started Sept. 18 and will run until Dec. 31. The daily limit is two with four in possession and six per season.

There is a special gear restriction calling for barbless hooks in the upper Salmon River from Vinegar Creek Boat Ramp (which is at the end of the road upstream from Riggins) to Long Tom Creek which is ¼ mile upstream from the mouth of the Middle Fork.

In addition, steelhead taken in this section which have a dorsal fin greater than 2¼ inches high and which are shorter than 37 inches must be released. These long finned steelhead are part of a wild strain that spawns in the Middle Fork of the Salmon River and are in short supply. So every effort is being made to maintain the wild stocks.

If your steelhead is missing the adipose fin (the soft, fleshy one located just in front of the tail on the top side) please cut off the head and return it to a local conservation officer of fish and game office.

The missing fin signals the presence of a small coded wire tag implanted in the nose of the fish. The tag is used in a variety of experiments designed to perpetuate the runs of steelhead into Idaho. Each tag assumes a great deal of importance and it is important we get as many returns as possible.

The main Clearwater River from its mouth upstream to the Clearwater Bridge at Orofino will open to a general steelhead season running from Oct. 16 to Dec. 31 with the same limits as the Salmon River. Predictions are for an excellent run of group B fish, numbering about 30,000 steelhead.

A chance meeting on backpack trail reflects on life's pace

By SAM COOK
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

DULUTH, Minn. — The backpacker strode toward me with his eyes on the ground. He was young, early 20s maybe. He was also in good shape, judging from the easy way he carried his pack.

I stepped off the trail to give him room. He was just a few feet away when he looked up, surprised.

"You startled me," he said. "I didn't expect to see anyone out here."

Out here was the Kekekabic Trail, 40 miles of rocks and roots near Ely, Minn. We were just a few miles from the Gunflint Trail end of the Kekekabic when we met.

We made the usual small talk of backpackers: Where are you coming from? How long will you be out? How do you like the trail?

We didn't bother with introductions. It didn't seem necessary. It never does when hikers meet on the trail. Yet both of us, I think, felt the unspoken bond that links those who meet on backcountry paths. Something, after all, had brought us to the same piece of forest at precisely the same moment.

So, we talked. Perhaps we'd have been on our separate ways sooner, but each of us was traveling alone at the time. Neither of us seemed in a hurry to move on.

After a while, we did introduce ourselves. The young hiker was Mitch Chiodi, 22, of Hibbing, Minn. He'd graduated from Colorado College in Colorado Springs, Colo., last spring. Ecology degree. Jobs in that field are scarce for someone with just an undergraduate degree, Mitch said. He hoped to go back to school, eventually get his Ph.D. But he wasn't in any hurry.

I liked Mitch right away. Had an easy manner about him. But it was more than that.

Somewhere under that pack of his was the free spirit I'd wanted to be when I was his age. He'd come home from Colorado after school, thrown a few essentials into a day pack, and headed south.

"I thumbed all over the South for a month," he said. "Went to the World's Fair in Knoxville, then over to Texas. Just visiting college buddies. It was cheap. I think I only spent about a hundred dollars the whole time I was gone. Had a great time."

Now here he was on the Kekekabic. He was thinking about Isle Royale, too.

He isn't just wandering aimlessly. He knows where he's going. He just doesn't feel pressured to get there.

I reflected on the time when I was Mitch's age. College had been fun. But summers I had just gone back to my little hometown and worked. After college, I had felt compelled to get a job and get on with life.

All the pieces fell into place. Good job. Marriage. New car. Security.

But looking back, in the last few years, I wish I'd have had a little of Mitch Chiodi in me. I wish I would have headed West, maybe worked at a ranch in the Rockies those summers in college. I wish just once I'd have thrown on a pack and let my thumb take me wherever fate let it. I wish I could have seen that getting on with life wasn't letting me do all the living I wanted to do.

The trouble is, once we get on the merry-go-round, it's hard to get off. The system gets its hooks into us, and it doesn't let go easily. We need that paycheck fix each week. We need that company health insurance.

Even in tough times, we often find ourselves with more money than time. We buy outdoor gear, enjoying the vicarious thrill it provides, though we know we'll be able to use it all too rarely. Our two weeks of vacation seem far too short, whether we take it in one lump, or piecemeal in three-day weekends.

The trick is to not to jump on the merry-go-round too soon. That's hard to do when all our friends are getting on, and the merry-go-round appears to be picking up speed. We're afraid if we wait, it will be going too fast when we're ready to get on.

But Mitch has resisted the urge. He's willing to risk the wait. He realizes, I think, what a fine period of his life he's in. He's in no hurry. He'll have time for a job. He'll have time for more school. For now, though, he has trails to walk, country to see.

We chatted for an hour or so, sharing sunflower seeds and dried apricots. Then we shouldered our packs and headed off in different directions. I turned around and watched Mitch stride off down the trail.

I'm not sure, but I think a little bit of me went with him.

Synthetic skiing requires changes

By DAVID ARNOLD
Boston Globe

BOSTON — Clover between the ski tips . . . skiers lounging outside the base lodge in bare feet.

This is a world of synthetic snow — granular bristle on zero inches of base — where one of the skier's greatest challenges is adapting to summer greens and autumn reds.

It's a world that feels, well, sort of different.

In what the manufacturer hails as a first for the United States, a plastic substitute for snow has come to North Andover — 1,300 linear feet of tiny British brushes that coat Boston Hills' Radar Run from top to bottom.

The artificial surface skis a little slower (nothing a bit of motor oil along the bottoms can't help). But, as one skeptic concluded when he realized that by the third run he was picking up where April skiing out West had left him, this stuff really works.

This month, Boston Hills officially opened the largest synthetic ski carpet ever assembled by Dendix Ski Slopes. The British company has supplied 93 such slopes worldwide but none in the United States.

Bob Dunn, president and general manager of Boston Hills, figured that what was good enough for Cypress and Hong Kong was good enough for eastern Massachusetts — similarly a region occasionally short on snowfall.

No artificial surface like this exists in the country, according to Kathe Dillmann of the New England Ski Areas Assn. "I've seen the surface at London ski shows," Dillmann said in a telephone interview, "but never here. I believe Eastern ski areas are waiting to see how the American public receives the product."

The product is Perma-snow, made of PVC plastic filaments bound in stainless steel tubing. Manufactured by Dendix in straight segments, the tubing subsequently is bent like ribbon candy, then wired, one piece to the next, to make four-by-six-foot honeycombs. These in turn are joined one to another on the site — 3,000 for Boston Hill's Radar Run — to create a flexible mat that conforms with a slope's contours. Both Dunn and Philip Judd of Dendix preferred not to discuss finances for the job.

Grass grows through the cavities. The surface is year-round, stopping skis from hitting rocks when the snow wears thin. Dunn is unsure as yet how to report "bare spots" come the first winter thaw.

Dunn first skied the surface five years ago at the Hillend Ski Area outside Edinburough, Scotland. "I'm not sure which I found more fascinating — skiing on artificial snow or skiing next to a golfer teeing up nearby," said Dunn.

Plastic-bottom skis slide well over plastic bristles — all the better with a little Pam, Quaker State, silicon spray, WD-40, or any other lubricant purchased from the local hardware or auto store. Boston Hills may develop an "oiling platform," Dunn said, for skiers as they step off the chairlift.

To the uninitiated, skiing on this artificial surface takes some adjustment — not so much in technique, but in almost everything else associated with the sport.

It's the little things like . . .

- Loading the car with skis while the neighbor next door is cutting his lawn.
- Explaining your route to an inquisitive toll collector.
- Walking to the ski lodge in sneakers — dry sneakers.
- Trying to remember not to brush the snow off your body when you fall.

Once you apply for Idaho First's Personal Line Gold, you may never have to apply for a loan again.

You know the kind of detailed questioning and prolonged rigamarole you have to go through every time you apply for a loan? That's why you want Idaho First's Personal Line Gold. Personal Line Gold is a personal line of credit instantly at your disposal anytime you need a loan, for any purpose, as often as you need it. With no further applications or approval procedures. $5,000 is the minimum credit you qualify for with Personal Line Gold. You may qualify for much more. There's no upper limit.

You tap your credit line through a special draft (like a check) or through the gold MasterCard which you get when you qualify for Personal Line Gold.

Good as Gold? . . . Better.

Your gold MasterCard is much more than just another way to tap your Personal Line Gold account. It gives you access to Personal Line Gold at over 3 million establishments around the world.

Your gold MasterCard identifies you as an upper income customer and gets you preferred treatment by merchants who honor MasterCard. You will receive faster service from hotels, travel agencies, airlines and car rental agencies. Gold MasterCard signifies a higher credit limit. This cuts down the number of tedious telephone credit confirmations you have to wait around for.

Your gold MasterCard also serves as a check guarantee card and allows you to get cash advances from any bank, or cash checks at participating hotels, airlines and car rental agencies that honor MasterCard.

Ask your Idaho First New Accounts Representative about all the other services and benefits of an Idaho First gold MasterCard.

Money Made Simple.

Personal Line Gold does more than simplify borrowing. It streamlines your money management. All your account activity —checking, Personal Line Gold, gold MasterCard—is reported monthly in one combined statement.

So come into any branch of Idaho First, find out more about Personal Line Gold, and then fill out one more application form. It may be your last.

NOTICE OF INTENDED RULE-MAKING AND NOTICE OF PROPOSED EMERGENCY RULE-MAKING

In compliance with Section 67-5203(a)(1), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, has initiated rule-making. The proposed action, under Docket Number 0301-8206, involves the amendment of rules governing ELIGIBILITY FOR FINANCIAL AND MEDICAL ASSISTANCE, Title 3, Chapter 1, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Health and Welfare. The action is proposed under the authority granted in Section 56-202(b) and 39-106(1), Idaho Code, for the purposes of implementing the provisions of the Federal Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, effective as soon as possible.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the intended action and of the principal issues involved:

The rules governing the provisions of the AFDC program relating to Deprivation of Parental Support by reason of continued absence solely due to military service; Amount of Grant when entitlement is less than $10.00; and AFDC Grant Payment procedures relating to rounding down a budget deficit not in an even dollar amount are proposed for adoption, amendment repeal, and/or renumbering.

Within the time limits specified below, any person can review the proposed rules in the DHW Administrative Procedure Section or in any of the regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available upon written request specifying the docket number cited above and at a rate of ten cents (10¢) per page. Checks must accompany the request and be made payable to the Department of Health and Welfare for the amount of one dollar and twenty cents ($1.20).

Anyone can submit written comment regarding the proposed rules, and any individual or industry who may be affected by the proposed rules is encouraged to submit information concerning the anticipated economic impact of the proposed action. For assistance on technical questions concerning the proposed rules, contact Pennie Bjornstad, Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, (208) 334-4337, Boise. All written comments and data concerning the proposed rules must be directed to the undersigned and must be postmarked or delivered on or before Tuesday, October 12, 1982.

Provisions for public hearings are waived, as allowed by Section 67-5203(a)(4), Idaho Code, since the Department has no discretion as to the substantive requirements of the proposed amendment which is designed solely to comply with the provisions of the Federal Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 to reflect the changes described above.

In addition, notice is also given, in compliance with Sections 67-5203(b) and 67-5-204(b)(2), Idaho Code, that the Division of Welfare, Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, has undertaken emergency procedures for rule-making. The action, under Docket Number 0301-8206E, involves the emergency amendment (described above) of rules governing ELIGIBILITY FOR FINANCIAL AND MEDICAL ASSISTANCE, Title 3, Chapter 1, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Health and Welfare. The action has been taken under the authority granted in Section 56-202(b) and 39-106(1), Idaho Code, for the purposes of implementing the provisions of the Federal Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, effective October 1, 1982.

Emergency rule-making is necessary because October 1, 1982, implementation is required by federal law. Failure to implement on October 1, 1982, may result in federal fiscal sanctions leading, in turn, to a significant decrease in funds available to pay AFDC benefits to approximately 8,500 low income families with children in Idaho. Benefits would be decreased or curtailed for those currently eligible and for those potentially eligible.

The rules, which will be adopted by emergency procedures, are to become effective on the 1st day of October, 1982, and to expire at the end of one hundred twenty (120) days on the 28th day of January, 1983.

Written comments concerning the proposed emergency rules will be accepted if postmarked or delivered to the undersigned on or before Monday, September 27, 1982.

Dated this 9th day of September, 1982.

Vulnerable: North-South. Dealer: South. The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	2♥	3♠	Pass
4♣	Pass	5♣	All pass

Opening lead: Heart king

The kibitizers joined the winners in laughter after the play of today's unusual game. However, the comedy was not about the loss by the defense; it was in how their tragedy came.

A no trump game would have proven unbeatable, however, there would have been no laughs. At five clubs, there was no legitimate play. Declarer could score six trump winners and four top tricks, but that was all. If he tried to establish dummy's diamonds, the 3-3 break would be nice, but with dummy's heart ace gone and with East holding the third trump, there would be no convenient entry to the diamonds.

Hopeless? Certainly not, that's what brought on the laughs. Declarer ducked the first heart, hoping for a switch, but West continued as East ruffed out dummy's ace. The spade switch was won by declarer's ace and the ace, king and a third diamond ruffed brought good news in that suit. Next came the king and ace of clubs to draw all the trumps and suddenly, declarer had found the way to use dummy's diamonds. Both major suit losers went on dummy's diamonds and South chalked up a vulnerable game.

"If East had not ruffed dummy's ace of hearts, his third trump would have stopped the laughs," lamented West. "Did you purposely set the trap?"

"Not really," replied South. "I made a reflexive duck at trick one. I had forgotten that your bid promised a six card suit."

Even the defenders had to laugh a little after hearing the tragic truth."

ANSWER: Two spades. Should play better at spades. South can use North's known high cards; South's hand will probably prove worthless dummy.

Coach Heber Kirkland drills his Panthers on tackling in preparation for Friday's homecoming game

Carey High smiling wide

4-0 Panthers reaching expectations

By MARV CLEMONS
Times-News sports editor

CAREY — Pardon the Panthers if they play with big grins underneath their yellow helmets and face masks.

Carey High School is enjoying one of the most successful seasons in the school's football history, giving the Panthers plenty of reasons to smile. Undefeated after four games, the Panthers have outscored their opposition 224 to 25 and allowed 20 of those points in the first game.

Heber Kirkland's squad is 2-0 in the Sawtooth Conference title chase and is looking like a state playoff contender in Idaho's eight-man football ranks.

Kirkland feels part — but not all — of the success can be attributed to the cycle theory.

"Some of the reasons for our success are maturity and the ability of the players to play and progress each year," he said. "It's mainly a senior group with some juniors and it's just one of those crops that comes along every now and then in a small community that just really works together as a unit."

Principal Robert Bowers agrees.

"I think this season is a culmination of expectations that have been growing for many years," Bowers said.

Most of the Panthers have been playing together since junior high.

Kirkland inherited most of this year's 22-man squad from Scott Peck, who decided to concentrate his coaching efforts on the basketball team. Peck's 1981 squad fashioned a 4-4 record, the victories coming in the last six games of the season. Had the team defeated Camas County in the finale (a 22-20 loss), it would've advanced to the state championship game opposite Cambridge.

But 1982 is a new season with a new coach and everyone associated with Carey High football appears to be enjoying each frequent touchdown. Kirkland and Bowers estimate there were as many Carey fans as Shoshone rooters at last Friday's game at Shoshone, a 72-6 Carey win to spoil the Indians' homecoming.

"We're getting a lot of support from the community and we enjoy every bit of it," Kirkland said.

What those Panther fans have been watching is a defense that produces turnovers seemingly at will. Carey's offense, while impressive in its own right, has been getting the ball in superb field position all season. Scores have come easily, not the result of sustained drives.

The secret to the defense, Kirkland says, is anticipation.

"These kids just have a knack for anticipating where the play is going to go and they are there to create a fumble or intercept a pass," he explained. "The reason that they can cause the turnovers is because of their quickness and something they learned last year and this year — they talk to each other on every play."

The Panthers' ability to predict the opposition's plans even surprises Kirkland. He recalls a recent halftime chat with his defense:

"In one game right before halftime our linebackers had three or four straight tackles (for losses) in the other team's backfield," Kirkland said. "At halftime I asked them; 'As your coach, I'd like to know what's going on out there. How do you do that? Are you calling blitzes or something?' They said, 'No, coach, we're just talking to each other and we're deciding where the play is going to go and who is going to be in that hole.' I just wanted to know if I'd missed something that we had talked about."

Senior middle linebacker Mike Shaffer is "probably the most tenacious" defender while transfer student Todd Wesche, the quickest player on the team, joined the Panthers for his senior year after playing in large-school programs at Spokane, Wash., (freshman and sophomore seasons) and at 700-student Boulder City, Nev., High (junior season). Neil Parke, another senior, is officially a safety but often plays up tight on the line or as a linebacker.

Kirkland determines the defense's basic set based on the opposition, but he allows his charges to do a lot of freelancing during the game.

"We used a 3-3 against Shoshone because of their tight formation, but we normally use a four diamond," Kirkland said, admitting he sometimes has trouble realizing what the defense is because of the variations.

Blitzing, Shaffer confirmed, is a big part of the Carey defense.

Kimberly first in Declo's triple tough test

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

Prep standings — D4

Julius Caesar had his Ides of March and Declo Coach Mike Matthews can go him one better.

Caesar suffered through his ordeal just once but around the Ides of October for each of the past five years, Matthews has had to re-live three weeks of horror.

His three longest weekends of the year begin at 7 p.m. Friday when his Hornets entertain the Kimberly Bulldogs. In another week it's the Valley Vikings and the following Friday, it's the Gooding Senators.

For four years that has been the toughest three-week A-3 schedule probably in the state.

"I hate it," said Matthews with considerable feeling. "Every year we get to here and I hate it."

Declo, along with Kimberly, Valley and Gooding, have been dominating the Canyon Conference for years. And Declo has been the odd-man-out in post-season playoffs. Declo has never swept the three-game ordeal. It's best showing was a 2-1 effort in 1978 but the loss to Valley relegated the Hornets to second place. It lost all three in 1979 and has been 1-2 the past two seasons.

"You get to this place in the season and you're in it (the conference chase)," Matthews said. "But for three weeks there's no room for a mistake. The others have at least a week in between (a meeting of the perennial powers) so they don't know how tough it is.

"Coming off the ball games we had the past four weeks, I wonder if our kids realize how much trouble they're in," Matthews emphasized.

None of which draws any sympathy from Kimberly Coach Gordon Hogan, who has beaten Declo the last two times.

The Bulldogs are 4-1 and have three shutouts to their credit.

"I'm sure this will be the stiffest defensive test we've faced to this point in the season," Hogan said of Declo's offense.

"They run the power lead out of the I and split back option very well. Their passing game has been good to them. Everything on offense must be good to them because they've sure been scoring a bunch," he said.

Plaguing Hogan's defensive thoughts are sprinters Bart Kelsey and Rod Buttars plus the veteran quarterbacking of Mont Turner.

"Declo is a very sound football team," Hogan said. "They didn't lose a lot of kids from last year. Those offensive people who have the speed to worry us are the same kids they use at linebacker and in the secondary. Most of their interior people were there last year. They are very sound.

"Sizewise I don't think it's a bad matchup. For us its just a matter of keeping up with their speed."

Matthews says his Hornets have been successful without a lot of speed and size.

"Kelsey and Turner are the two biggest kids on the team and Kelsey and Buttars are the two fastest — and by a long ways. They're the only ones who can break 5.1," he said.

He also negated the point parade his Hornets have mounted.

"Since we played Aberdeen — and they beat us — we haven't played anyone in so far as them getting into the game with us. Filer throws six interceptions — and we'll take them. We get three turnovers and two interceptions from Wood River — and we take them — and Raft River was just too young and inexperienced to play us. So what do you say about all those points?" he asked.

Finally, however, Matthews qualified it all by noting "these kids do what they're told and that's been a big plus for us."

While the Canyon clash steals the spotlight for the week, another 14 games will be played by Magic Valley teams.

Minico makes the long trip to Idaho Falls — to — meet — the — always-tough Skyline Grizzlies at 7:30 p.m. Coach Red Halverson hopes to have Von Peterman back at quarterback and put a little passing pressure on the Grizzly defense to open up some running room.

Jerome, downed by Caldwell last week, will be home to the Burley Bobcats who have won one of five outings. Jerome proved itself a pretty good pass defense team against pass-conscious Rigby and since Burley has shown a lot of shotgun offense and throwing the past couple of weeks, its secondary probably will have to rise to the occasion again.

Buhl, struggling along at 0-5 and without many points thus far, gets a chance to break into the win column by hosting similarly winless South Fremont.

While Kimberly and Declo are battling, the Canyon Conference offers a couple other battles. Valley, fresh from a big win over Gooding, will be at Filer, which had last week off. Wendell and Glenns Ferry, both at 1-4, square off at Wendell while Gooding will take its wounds to Wood River for a non-conference contest.

In the Magic Valley Conference, pace-setting Murtaugh will be home to Hansen. This pits an undefeated team in Murtaugh against the winless Huskies. But Hansen has proved a

Jones wary of Bruins' deceiving 3-game slate as I.F. visits

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Of all the things a Twin Falls High football team shouldn't have to worry about, overconfidence and/or complacency shouldn't be included.

Yet, that's what Coach Bill Jones worries about as he faces the beginning of a weird three-game stretch of the schedule.

The Bruins will be home to the Idaho Falls Tigers Friday, host Pocatello next week and visit Borah Oct. 22. To this point those three foes have one thing in common — they haven't won a game and boast a collective 0-15 record.

"Right now we have players and fans talking around saying that the next three games are going to be a piece of cake. They're talking about a big winning record season," Jones said.

Jones did some quick figuring and came up with the fact that of the five teams Twin Falls has run up a 3-2 record against thus far, they boast a collective 15-5 record. The next five to this point are 6-19 and, if Bonneville is taken from that list, 2-18.

"There is no question in my mind that four of the next five teams we play can beat four of the last five teams we've played. Beat them pretty handily — and I don't mean to take anything away from our first five opponents," said Jones of the quirk in this year's scheduling.

Jones maintains he's not whistling past the graveyard.

"I've been here seven years and I've never seen a situation like this where people can become so confident so quickly," he said.

Although Twin Falls is a modest 3-2, the relative historical strength of Twin Falls is shown up in one revealing statistic. Should this team not win another game, it would better the showing of seven teams in the last 22 years and tie four more. In the last 22 years, Twin Falls has won 81, lost 121 and tied 9. Twenty-four of those wins came in three seasons — 1962-63-66. Only seven teams have bettered the .500 level and the most wins has been eight. Overall, that amounts to 38 percent success. But another statistic shows Twin Falls at 26 percent over the last half of its season historically.

All of which brings Jones to his point:

"As far as I'm concerned Idaho Falls is loaded with size and talent. It will be the biggest team we'll face this year without a doubt. Pocatello is 0-5 but it held Bonneville to one touchdown and no other team has held them to less than three. And Borah. Well, Borah plays Meridian this week and could well be 0-6 when we go up there. But Twin Falls has never beaten Borah," he said.

The case in hand, Idaho Falls, is a puzzlement to Jones.

"Their offensive line averages 218 across and the smallest guy is the left guard at 190. That means there are some 230 and 240-pounders in there, too," he said. "I know Idaho Falls expected to have a good record this season with that good sophomore team coming up to the varsity and all that size returning among the juniors.

"(Idaho Falls quarterback Greg) Talamentiz can throw forever. They throw quite a bit and seem to prefer to throw long more than short. They do everything off play action and that can cause us some problems," he said.

"Defensively, I think they have done quite well. They trailed Capital only 7-6 at halftime and Capital might be the best team in the state. In the second half it all unravelled on them. They held Meridian to less than 30 yards in total offense in the first quarter and were down 21-0 — two punt returns and a pass interception return. At halftime Meridian was ahead 28-0 and Idaho Falls had stopped everything they tried," he said of perhaps Idaho's highest scoring A-1 team.

"I have to think the breaks have gone against Idaho Falls in every game. They have too much size, too much talent to be 0-5 if everything is equal," Jones said.

"I doubt Idaho Falls is hanging its head and just waiting for the year to end. I think they'll come in here with some pride and determination and we'd better have our helmets strapped on tight," he said.

From the Bruin standpoint, Jones is pleased because, for the first time this year, he'll have four running backs available. Scot Scherer's injury against Minico proved to be a severe bruise but he should be back. Also back, after missing three games, will be fullback Corky Federico, more famous at the moment for his high-altitude fishing exploits. Virgil Hurt and Scott Morgan, who picked up 153 yards last year, are healthy.

"We've felt pretty insecure with just three running backs and when it was down to two in the second half against Minico, we were wondering," Jones said.

Big Sky

Bengals, Aggies desperate for same fix — a victory

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

LOGAN, Utah — Non-conference games usually possess less importance than conference battles, but they're telling that to Idaho State or Utah State.

The middle of the college football season is upon us, and for teams with 2-2 records like ISU and Utah State, which meet Saturday (KART Radio, 1400, 1:30 p.m.), it's a pivotal time. Victory can provide impetus for the remainder of the season; a loss might serve as a character-deflater.

"They're somewhat in the same position as we are — they've got to win a ballgame," ISU Coach Dave Kragthorpe said Wednesday.

Suffice it to say that the Bengals and Aggies will play so hard that everybody on the field, not just the quarterbacks, might need a flak jacket.

Once-mighty ISU has fallen, and in a big way. Last year's Big Sky and I-AA national champions have lost their last two games, the most recent a three-overtime 30-27 gut-wrencher to conference foe Montana State. The Bengals are in danger of sinking, but a victory over Utah State, a Division I school, could right them just in time for the core of the conference season.

Meanwhile, Utah State lost 31-6 last week to perennial nonentity Fresno State. As the score indicates, it wasn't a pretty defeat.

Trailing 10-0, Utah State had a first and goal on Fresno's three late in the first half, but failed to score despite getting three chances from the one. Fresno waited until the second half to destroy the Aggies, scoring on its first three possessions.

Last year the Bengals surged past Utah State at the Minidome, 50-24. But those were the days when broken ISU plays would result in 20-yard gains. Now, broken plays stay broken for the Bengals. Another game like last week for either team, and the rest of the entire season could be broken.

What has been shattered for the Bengals all too often during their two-game losing streak is their concentration, in Kragthorpe's estimation. The third-year coach attributes nearly all of ISU's failures to erratic self-discipline.

"The mental errors — those bothered me most," Kragthorpe said, explaining that such mistakes manifested themselves in unnecessary penalties. "In a game like that (against Montana State), one, two or three of them make the difference."

Kragthorpe said that ISU broke down in more than just one area last week. Penalties hindered the Bengals, but so did shoddy pass receiving and an occasionally sloppy defense.

"If we hadn't gotten stupid penalties — offside, motion — if we could have eliminated those we would have won the ballgame," he said. "On the other hand, there were those dropped balls. (Without them) we still would have won and we could have done all the other dumb things," he continued, chuckling.

"But defensively, I felt the tackling was the worst since I've been here."

Kragthorpe maintained his faith in kicker Perry Larson, who missed a 30-yard field goal that would have forced a fourth overtime period.

"That's an awful lot of pressure to put on a person in that kind of circumstance, playing before a hostile crowd and all that," Kragthorpe said. "He had kicked two field goals prior to that that were pressure-packed."

Nor is Paul Peterson, the junior transfer from San Diego struggling through his first year as ISU's quarterback, to blame.

"He's still learning the offense; still missing some reads and throwing to a few wrong receivers," Kragthorpe said. "By the same token, he's making good progress . . . maybe it's a good time to point out that his statistics are better than (Mike) Machurek's were after four games in 1980."

The Bengals will need a Machurek-like performance from Peterson to help hold off the Aggies, who doubtlessly remember the 27-point barrage ISU launched against them last year in the fourth quarter.

"We really didn't blow them out," Kragthorpe insisted. Indeed, ISU trailed 24-23 entering the final period. "We certainly weren't running up the score. But I'm sure they could construe it that way."

Utah State is led offensively by quarterback Doug Samuels, who has had to fight injuries this season, and flanker Paul Jones, who has caught 14 passes for 155 yards. In addition, Samuels' twin brother James is the starting tight end.

Defensively, tackle Shawn Miller and outside linebacker Pat McKenna are the Aggies' best, along with cornerback Patrick Allen, who intercepted two passes against Weber State in a 31-10 victory three weeks ago.

Kragthorpe feels sure Utah State will play with no holds barred, strategically as well as physically.

"I think they'll pull all the stops; use everything and anything," he said. "We'll probably see a lot of gadgets and trick plays on offense, and they'll come at us defensively with blitzes."

Carey

Blitzing, Shaffer confirmed, is a big part of the Carey defense.

"We've been catching the other teams off guard," he said.

Offensively, Kirkland uses two different attacks. He calls one unit his "speed offense" and the other his "power offense."

Parke and Wesche man the running back spots in the speed offense while Shaffer and Mark Conrad are the power backs.

"We primarily will use one offense for a series," Kirkland said. "We do some changing around in the line as well. It keeps the kids fresh."

Kirkland figures other teams have detected the strategy, but notes that nobody's been able to stop it.

Carey's versatility shows up in the fact that no less than 10 players have scored touchdowns and no back has rushed for 100 yards in a game. Junior quarterback Brad Tingey calls his own plays 95 percent of the time and at least seven players can play virtually any position.

Wesche, who helps his grandfather run a ranch, spent most of his summers in Carey, but didn't expect he'd play for the Panthers. He said he enjoys the small program.

"You work hard, but you don't need to work for position as hard," he said.

Kirkland said Wesche has been a big factor in the team's success and just how big of a factor may be determined at Friday's homecoming game against North Gem. The senior suffered a broken little finger on his right hand last week and will be out for two to three weeks.

Wesche plans to be ready for the season finale against Camas County.

Shaffer also acknowledges Camas County as the key foe.

"We can't lose our next two, but Camas is the team we've got to beat," he said.

If Carey finishes first or second in the conference, a trip to the state playoffs will result. Kirkland, like most coaches, is taking the one-game-at-a-time approach and his players echo that feeling.

"We'll make state if we don't screw up someplace along the line," one said before Tuesday's practice.

Kirkland can't and won't totally suppress state playoff visions.

"I'm sure it (state) has crossed people's minds many times," the coach said. "You hope for something like that and when you win two or three games it looks like you've got some possibilities."

Kirkland says the Panthers are not banking on their past success to produce victories in the remaining three games.

"I don't see the team with the attitude of being high and mighty or anything like that," he said. "It's just a determination. They want to go out each game, do a good job and use the talents they have."

Northern Iowa 'respite' may help injured Vandals

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

MOSCOW — With the injury list growing and the emotional makeup of the team perhaps dulled, University of Idaho's Vandals travel to Northern Iowa for their fifth game of the season Saturday afternoon.

From an injury standpoint, perhaps it is good that Northern Iowa, a non-conference and basically non-traditional foe, appears on the schedule now. Coach Denny Erickson has lost two major offensive weapons, had another impaired at least partially and the thin ranks of linemen-linebackers have grown more shallow.

Coming off a one-point Big Sky Conference win over Weber State, the Vandals' overall team emotional pitch could sag. And that, Erickson said, could be disastrous.

"Like I've said before we are not a good enough football team to not get ready to play emotionally against anyone. We're winning right now because we're playing hard and want to win. If we lose that, we are in trouble," he promised.

Tailback Kerry Hickey, who reinjured a hamstring pull in a two-play appearance against Weber, and flanker Curtis Johnson are out. Hickey's injury could be healed in two weeks. But Johnson is our definitely for three, having undergone orthoscopic surgery for cartilage repair.

Tight end transfer Curt Vestman "broke the outside of his hand but it'll be taped up and he's going to play." Gone for the year is Scott Auker who underwent knee surgery Wednesday morning.

With some of his big guns silenced, Erickson noted the Northern Iowa battle could be difficult.

"They're 2-1-1," he said. "Our problem is we beat them last year pretty good. They were a better team than that last year and they lost only one guy off the offense and one off the defense. So they will be a better team this year because they are very experienced. They're playing at home during homecoming and Idaho beat them something like 50-14 last year and I'm sure they're going to remember that."

Erickson said his defense could expect a "balanced attack" between running and throwing. UNI quarterback Larry Miller is 51 for 83 for just over 700 yards. He prefers throwing to Neal Correa, who has gained 230 yards in receptions. On the ground, Steve McNeil is the major weapon with over 300 yards in four games.

"They are huge in the line," Erickson continued. "They have one defensive tackle, Jim Lewis (6-2, 262 pounds), who is really a good player."

"They are bigger than Weber and about the same as UOP," Erickson said comparing Northern Iowa to two previous Idaho foes. But helping somewhat is "they don't appear to have the quickness of Weber."

Although Idaho's offense has been getting points, the loss of so many offensive players leads Erickson to say "we have to start playing better defensively. We've had a lot of individuals who have played well but as a team we've given up too many things. We need more out of our defensive secondary than we got against Weber. Offensively, we have to throw and catch it like we have the last couple three games."

Erickson admitted that the self-destruct syndrome that has been part of Idaho's major problem over the years seemed in evidence for a time against Weber State. The Vandals had some penalties offensively and defensively plus turnovers at critical times in the second half when Weber State appeared on the verge of breaking the game open.

"When we were down 31-21 it would have been very easy for our guys to go back to that syndrome or whatever you cant to call it," Erickson said. "But they believe in themselves and believed they could win and they did. The difference of what it has been in the past was the final score."

Montana in position to cripple wounded Broncos

BOISE — It's lofty status as Big Sky Conference leader erased by Northern Arizona, Boise State faces a stiff challenge from the University of Montana Saturday (7 p.m., KLIX Radio, 1310) at Bronco Stadium.

Joe Harper's NAU squad gave Boise State its first loss of the season last Saturday, putting Jim Criner's squad in a must-win situation against the Grizzlies.

The situation is compounded by two factors — BSU suffered several injuries in the defeat and Montana quarterback Marty Mornhinweg is one of the league's best.

Tight end Donnie Summers is out for the year and defensive lineman Michel Bourgeau will miss at least three weeks. Both suffered injuries to the tendons on the outside of the knee. Bourgeau pulled his and had scope surgery earlier this week. Summers' tore his tendons and will miss the rest of the season. In addition, tailback Rodney Webster sustained a deep thigh bruise on his left leg and receiver Randy Mayo injured a hand. Webster is expected to play against Montana while Mayo's status won't be decided until later in the week.

Mornhinweg, a 5-10 junior, has completed 45 of 80 passes for 505 yards. His favorite targets are tight end Brian Salonen and Dave Glenn.

The Grizzlies, tied with Montana State for the Big Sky Conference lead at 2-0, run the sprint draw offense. They are probably the only team in the league that will run more than pass, but they too have taken more to the air.

"Marty is just like Joe Ailotti," Dave Mendiola, BSU's sports information director, said. "He inspires a team and can get the job done."

Getting the job done is something the Broncos had trouble with last week.

Criner was reportedly very upset over the Broncos' loss to NAU, but a look at the game films has tempered the coach's displeasure, according to Mendiola.

"When we looked at the films you could see that has a team we played pretty well, but there were lots of missed assignments, missed blocks and things like that," Mendiola said. "Against so-so teams we probably could've gotten away with some of those things, but NAU was too prepared for us and they were there to make the stop or break the big play when we missed an assignment."

Mendiola said Criner has had the Broncos working on a lot of technique drills this week.

capable defensive team and with the enthusiasm usually generated in the rivalry, this could be a slam-bam defensive struggle.

Castleford entertains an unknown quantity in Carlin, Nev. The other league games have Oakley at Hagerman and Raft River at Mackay.

There are four eight-man games. Undefeated Carey, 4-0, will be home to the 1-4 North Gem Cowboys. Leadore will be at Richfield which showed good offensive punch last week. Shoshone visits Rockland with a chance to pick up its second win.

The eight-man highlight should come at Clark County which will be hosting Camas County. Clark has allowed just one TD in four wins while being blanked by Carey in its one loss.

Camas County is 4-1 and has won three of the four by shutout.

Angels mix subtlety, power in 4-2 triumph

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — No matter what name you apply to California's style of ball right now, one thing is for certain — to Milwaukee it looks like a snowball.

The Angels combined "Little Ball" and "Big Ball" in support of Bruce Kison's continued October heroics to move within one victory of their first American League pennant with a 4-2 victory Wednesday night over the Brewers.

Kison, 4-0 lifetime in the playoffs, received a squeeze and a sacrifice fly from Bob Boone, a home run by Reggie Jackson and a key single and bunt by Tim Foli to give the Angels a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series that is scheduled to resume Friday in Milwaukee.

"For many years I was fortunate to play with very competitive ballclubs in Pittsburgh that were involved in pennant races," Kison said in attempting to explain his success late in the season. "Winning throughout a pennant race is a team effort. I don't have a good answer or else I would apply it to the rest of the season."

Boone sounded pleased about the status of the series.

"Whenever you start a playoff at home it's important to take two (games)," said Boone. "The idea on the road is to split."

Though the Brewers failed to do that, Milwaukee manager Harvey Kuenn didn't seem worried about his club's situation.

"I'm definitely glad we're going back to Milwaukee," Kuenn said. "We've had our backs up against the wall before. I'm still very confident we'll win and my players are confident."

The only trouble for Milwaukee is that the Angels may be even more confident.

"These ballpayers believe in themselves a great deal," said Jackson. "Each guy can look around the clubhouse before a game and know that you're going to play well."

Kison scattered five hits and struck out eight to tie his season high. He retired the last 13 batters in a row. The only runs the right-hander allowed came on a tainted two-run homer by Paul Molitor when center fielder Fred Lynn missed on an attempt for a shoestring catch.

Cy Young Award candidate Pete Vuckovich, who lost his last two starts of the regular season, suffered the defeat.

No team has ever captured an AL playoff series after losing the first two games.

Kison, 10-5 during the regular season, entered the game with a reputation as a clutch late-season player. He owned a 27-7 lifetime record in September and October, not including post-season play. He went 3-0 with an 0.57 ERA in five previous playoff games and was 1-1 in the World Series.

Kison was injured on June 22 when line drive off the bat of Johnny Grubb struck his right shin. He was slow to come around and became a forgotten man until being reinstated into the starting rotation on Sept. 14. He won three key games in California's stretch drive and carried his excellence into the post-season. But he had plenty of help before an Anaheim Stadium crowd of 64,179.

For the second straight game, California took an early lead. Lynn opened the second with a harmless-looking pop fly that dropped in front of center fielder Gorman Thomas, who didn't get a good jump. One out later, DeCinces doubled past diving shortstop Robin Yount and into the center field alley, with Lynn stopping at third. After Bobby Grich was hit by a pitch to load the bases, Foli singled home Lynn and Boone delivered DeCinces with a suicide squeeze, giving California a 2-0 lead.

Jackson continued his history of October heroics by hitting the first pitch thrown to him in the third well over the center-field fence to give California a 3-0 lead. It was Jackson's sixth career playoff homer and gave him 18 playoff RBI, one more than former teammate Graig Nettles.

California threatened to turn the game into a rout in the fourth. DeCinces walked and went to second on Grich's single. After Foli sacrificed, Boone lined a sacrifice fly to right for his second RBI of the game and a 4-0 lead.

An unwise play by Lynn changed the complexion of the game in the fifth. With two out and Charlie Moore on second, Lynn attempted a shoestring catch of Molitor's sinking liner. Not only was he unable to reach the ball, but he failed to block it and it rolled to the fence for a home run that made the score 4-2. It was only the second inside-the-park homer in playoff history, Nettles having hit the other in 1980.

Rain soaks NL opener at St. Louis; Braves, Cards try once more tonight

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The first game of the National League playoffs between the Atlanta Braves and the St. Louis Cardinals was rained out Wednesday and the Cardinals were happier than a convention of umbrella salesmen.

The postponement, which came after a delay of two hours and 28 minutes in the bottom of the fifth inning, not only wiped out a 1-0 Atlanta lead but, more importantly for the Cardinals, probably limited their old nemesis, Phil Niekro, to only one appearance in the best-of-five series.

"No doubt it's a break for us," said Cardinals' manager Whitey Herzog after more than two hours of steady rain turned Busch Stadium into a replica of the Mississippi River. "It helps us because Niekro can only pitch one time."

Niekro had blanked the Cardinals on four hits over four innings, making it 30 2-3 consecutive scoreless innings that he has pitched in his last four starts over the past two weeks.

Braves' manager Joe Torre said he might come back with the 43-year-old knuckleballer in the third game Saturday at Atlanta, but he doubted very much if he would be able to use him more than once in the series. So far this season, the Cardinals have managed only three earned runs in 25 innings against Niekro.

"I plan on Niekro pitching on Saturday," said Torre, "but I would doubt I would be able to use him if the series goes to a fifth game."

The Cardinals have a similar predicament in that their ace right-hander, Joaquin Andujar, probably will get only one start in the playoffs also. Andujar pitched five innings Wednesday and Herzog said he would probably not use his Dominican ace until Sunday. However, the Cardinals have a much stronger pitching staff behind Andujar than the Braves do after Niekro.

Wednesday's game was only two outs from becoming official when it was halted with one out in the bottom of the fifth inning and the Braves leading 1-0. After the long delay, National League president Charles Feeney postponed the contest until tonight, beginning at 6:15 MDT. It marked the first game in playoff competition that was ever rained out after it had started and the postponement touched off a mild controversy.

Torre thought that plate umpire Billy Williams had acted hastily in halting the game but the Braves' skipper admitted he could understand the umpire's dilemma.

"I don't think the game would have been called that quickly during the regular season," said Torre. "But I think the umpires and all the National League officials would have taken more heat if the game was called off after five innings than before five innings.

"I don't have any animosity toward anyone about it but I feel that any post-season game that is started should be finished. I'd like to see a rule put in where a game could be continued from where it is stopped, but I can also see how that would pose a scheduling problem for the league and for the fans."

Williams admitted he had put a quick stop to the game because he didn't feel it would be fair for the contest to have gone only five innings and then been called.

"After one out, it started to rain more than a drizzle," said Williams. "I wouldn't characterize it as a downpour, but it was coming down pretty good. Mr. Feeney gave me the authority to stop the game at any point and I felt this was the point. I didn't want to do anything to embarrass the league officials or the umpiring crew. I didn't want to rush and play two outs and then have the outcome decided because we didn't use common sense."

The second game of the playoffs will now be switched to Friday night in St. Louis, with the series then shifting to Atlanta for the third game Saturday night. The fourth game, if necessary, will be played in Atlanta Sunday night and the fifth game, if necessary, slated for Atlanta Monday afternoon.

Pascual Perez has been named by Torre to pitch tonight and Bob Forsch has been tabbed by Herzog to hurl for the Cardinals.

Wednesday's rainout was the first at Busch Stadium since June 26, 1979.

Atlanta scored in the first inning when Claudell Washington led off with a double, was sacrificed to third by Rafael Ramirez and scored when Chris Chambliss lined a two-out single off the glove of diving shortstop Ozzie Smith. St. Louis missed scoring chances in two of the first three innings against Niekro.

In the first, the Cardinals loaded the bases with two out only to watch Niekro retire the club's best run-producer, George Hendrick, on a fly to center. St. Louis got another runner to third with two out in the third when Lonnie Smith hit a hard smash that handcuffed second baseman Glenn Hubbard and skidded along the artificial surface into right center. Keith Hernandez nearly got the run home with a liner off the glove of third baseman Bob Horner, but Hernandez, thinking that Horner had caught the ball on the fly, stopped running and was thrown out easily at first.

The Braves missed a scoring opportunity in the fourth when Andujar experienced control problems. He walked Dale Murphy to start the inning and after getting Chambliss on a fly to center, he hit Horner with a pitch. However, he pitched out of the jam by getting Jerry Royster on a called third strike and retiring Hubbard on a grounder to second.

Raiders deny Davis seeks Oakland return

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An Oakland newspaper reported Wednesday that Al Davis is working through an intermediary about striking a deal that would return the Raiders to Oakland.

But a ranking Raiders official — executive assistant Al LoCasale — called the story "a total fabrication."

Eastbay Today said it has learned through an unidentified source that Dr. Robert Albo, a prominent Oakland surgeon, has contacted Oakland Coliseum officials and outlined major concessions Davis wants in order for the Raiders to return from Los Angeles to Oakland.

The newspaper goes on to list the concessions, including Davis' rights to a share in the ownership of a future Los Angeles expansion team in the National Football League, a reduction in luxury boxes from 120 to 60 and the Raiders' right to receive $20 million and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission $10 million in damages from the NFL.

"This (story) is typical of the continuing attempts to split the Raiders from the Los Angeles community," said LoCasale. "It has absolutely no basis in fact."

As for Albo, LoCasale described him as "everyone's friend."

"At no time," said LoCasale, "has he been put in the position of representing Al Davis or the Raiders."

Eastbay Today said William B. Morrish, chairman of the Oakland Coliseum board's football committee, has scheduled a meeting with Albo to explore the prospects of a Raider return. Morrish was unavailable to confirm or deny the story. Neither was Ray Ward, who heads the Coliseum board.

Davis and the Raiders went through two costly trials before obtaining legal permission to move the Raider franchise from Oakland to Los Angeles, where the team already has played two exhibition games.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission used stronger language than LoCasale in refuting the Eastbay Today story.

"That whole story is bull," said Bill Robertson. "I talked with Al Davis (Wednesday morning) and it's all wrong. The team is down here lock, stock and barrel and this is where it's going to stay."

Robertson, too, said Albo is not a spokesman or agent for Davis and the Raiders.

Still, the newspaper story may have substance since the Raiders as yet have not signed a formal contract with the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Judge's decision revives NFLPA All-Star game

Strike kills another week of schedule

NEW YORK (UPI) — The 16th day of the players' strike proved particularly painful for the NFL Wednesday, with the league receiving disconcerting news from a federal judge in Washington and announcing another weekend of games had been scrubbed — ensuring a full 16-game season will not be played.

No new talks have been scheduled between the Players Association and Management Council in the first regular-season strike in the league's 63-year history. Formal negotiations broke off Saturday in Washington.

In the late afternoon, Jack Donlan, executive director of the Management Council, turned down a union request for another bargaining session this week in Washington, saying further talks hinge on the players dropping their No. 1 demand.

"Yesterday the (Council's) Executive Committee met to give you an opportunity, in a face-to-face meeting with the owners, to discuss your wage scale proposal," read Donlan's telegram to union head Ed Garvey. "The owners reiterated what you have heard for several months across the bargaining table — that your wage scale is unacceptable. To meet when you still have your wage scale on the table will produce no constructive results as the last three days of negotiations proved."

League spokesman Jim Heffernan said Wednesday the 13 games slated for Sunday, plus the Monday night game between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, have been called off, raising the total number of games scrubbed thus far to 42.

"Since three regular-season weekends of games have not been able to be played and in view of previous announcements that a maximum of two weekends of games could possibly be made up in the event of a prompt settlement, this means at least one weekend of games has now been lost for the season," said Heffernan.

ED GARVEY
Ruling pleases him

The league previously announced two weekends could be made up by adjusting the wild card playoff games and using the idle weekend in between the conference title game and the Super Bowl, which is firmly scheduled for Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 30.

In Washington, federal judge John G. Penn paved the way for the union to proceed with its plan for renegade All-Star games when he refused to rule on whether the standard NFL player contract is enforceable. Penn also ruled that all league suits seeking to bar striking NFL players from the proposed games must be filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, rather than in local and state courts.

Penn denied a request by NFL counsel James C. McKay for a stay of his ruling pending an appeal. McKay said the league would file an appeal immediately and ask for a quick hearing.

Following Penn's non-decision, the NFLPA said the first of the All-Star games, originally set for Sunday, will be played Oct. 17 in Washington's RFK Stadium. Earlier this week, several NFL clubs asked state courts to bar players from the games on the basis of their contracts, but Penn said those suits must be heard in federal court in Washington.

According to the standard player contract, NFL players may "not participate in any football game not sponsored by the league unless the game is first approved by the league."

Union head Ed Garvey, informed of Penn's actions as he left a conference with National Labor Relations Board attorneys, was elated with any shred of good news after his views had been promptly rebuffed in Tuesday's secretive meeting with the six-man executive committee of the Council.

"We're delighted," said the NFLPA's executive director. "There's never been a doubt that the NFL has plenty of money to pay lawyers. We can't afford to run around defending players in every county court in the country.

"We've never lost to the NFL in court. The NFL hasn't won a case in my lifetime and I don't anticipate they will."

In refusing to rule on the language of the player contracts, Penn said, "It would be premature to decide whether those paragraphs are enforceable on the present record as there are outstanding issues of fact which must be further developed before the court can reach the merits of the contract issue."

Union lawyers appeared before Penn Monday and said player contracts are no longer enforceable because the collective bargaining agreement expired July 15 and a labor dispute is in progress.

In sharp contrast to the inertia of negotiations surrounding the key union demand for a wage scale tied to a central fund, Wednesday was

Canyon loop alters cage tourney to comply with state guidelines

TWIN FALLS — Members of the Canyon Conference, all of Magic Valley's A-3 teams, adjusted their basketball tournament Wednesday night to accommodate state playoff requirements.

The local district, which sends its district champion automatically to state, pits its runner-up against the second-place team from the Boise area in a one-game showdown for an eighth spot at state.

With the district tournament a double-elimination affair, the possibility of an extra session would require the local runner-up to go into the next playoff the next day. The conference coaches voted to run the district tournament Tuesday through Saturday the first week (Feb. 15-19) and Feb 22, 23 and 24 the second week.

The coaches also voted to have head coaches of all varsity sports meet immediately at the close of their specific seasons to select all-conference teams. They also voted to provide conference championship medals to the winning teams in football, basketball, volleyball and track.

Valley was allowed an exception to the conference rule that said beginning on Oct. 1, all league football games would begin at 7 p.m. Valley said the hour lost by that ruling had resulted in lower gate receipts. It was given permission to start home games at 8 p.m.

The group also voted a uniform admission charge for all varsity events with $3 for adults and $1 for students with activity card.

Sports briefs

Bliss boosters prevail

BLISS — Ritchie Graves' two goals in the closing five minutes lifted the Bliss Bears past the Gooding State Redskins 3-1 in a season-closing soccer match Wednesday.

Graves broke up a sharp defensive duel during which Bliss had five shots on goal against three for Gooding State.

Gooding State took the lead about 15 minutes into the first half when Sam Weber score but five minutes later, Richard Smith tied it for the Bears.

The teams were scoreless until Graves tucked it away.

The season ends with a tournament Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at Gooding State although pairings can't be established until Ketchum and Dietrich play Friday.

Bliss will play the loser of that game at 1:30 p.m. Monday with the winner advancing to the finals Wednesday afternoon.

The five Magic Valley teams will select two all-star teams which then will host two similar aggregations from Boise in a one-day, four-game all-star binge at Gooding State Oct. 16.

Ketchum man takes race

KETCHUM — Leif Odmark of Ketchum won the 60-year-old age class in a record time at the St. George, Utah, marathon over the weekend.

Odmark ran the 26.2 miles with 1,700 other runners in darkness and finished in daylight 2:57 later. He cut 16 minutes off his previous best time and moved among the nationally ranked performances. It also was a course record for his age group.

Twilight run to be held

BURLEY — Twilight fun runs of two and four miles will be conducted by the Mini-Cassia Jogging Club Oct. 11.

The race begins at 6:30 p.m. at Burley High School with a $4 entry fee. Certificates and T-shirts will be awarded to all finishers.

O'Leary griddlers triumph

Both the eighth and ninth grade football teams from O'Leary Junior High School won games Wednesday afternoon.

The eighth grade team blanked Burley 20-0 at Burley. No details on the game were reported.

The ninth grade squad whipped West Minico Junior High 33-0 at Rupert. David Sturgil scored two touchdowns while Robbie Lewis, Tom McLinn, Gary Flora and Brian Howard each scored a six-pointer. Howard also ran across a two-point conversion and kicked a PAT.

Jerome 7th graders win

JEROME — The Jerome Kiwanis 7th grade football team improved its record to 3-1 Tuesday night by edging Buhl, 12-6.

Quarterback Joel Jand scored Jerome's first touchdown and halfback Lance Ruhter added the second.

Atlanta wary of whoring

ATLANTA (UPI) — Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young made it clear Wednesday he doesn't want America's favorite pastime tainted by the world's oldest profession.

With the prospect of a possible World Series and a national banking convention being held simultaneously in Atlanta, Young, an ordained minister, urged police to immediately crack down on prostitution to "send a signal" that the trade will not be tolerated during these events.

"I think particularly now that ... we have people coming in for the playoffs this weekend.... It would be appropriate to do some raids in a couple of neighborhoods just to establish a principle," Young said.

The Atlanta Braves and St. Louis Cardinals will play the third game in their National League playoff series Friday night at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. Two more games could follow Saturday and Sunday.

If the Braves advance to the World Series, the first game will be in Atlanta next Tuesday when some 80,000 bankers will also be here for their national convention.

Bruins cut goalie Craig

BOSTON (UPI) — Jim Craig's 28-month stay with the Boston Bruins, punctuated by injuries and at time some acrimony, ended Wednesday when the NHL team bought out the option year of his contract, making the U.S. Olympic hero a free agent.

Craig, who participated in practice Wednesday before receiving the news from General Manager Harry Sinden in a brief meeting, was not surprised by the move. He had seen no action during the exhibition season and the Bruins did not list him on their roster in the media guide. Boston made Craig available in Monday's waiver draft but there were no takers.

"I'd like to see Jimmy get a chance," said Bruins Coach Gerry Cheevers. "Under certain situations, he might be able to help a team."

enlivened by legal maneuvers on several fronts.

In Buffalo, two cases stemming from the strike were delayed by parties seeking to transfer the proceedings from a state court to a federal courtroom.

Representatives from the Bills and the Turner Broadcasting System appeared briefly in state Supreme Court, with attorneys for the broadcasting firm notifying the Bills they had filed papers seeking to have the matter removed to federal court in Buffalo.

The NFL, with the Bills one of the eight teams, obtained a show-cause order last week against Turner Broadcasting.

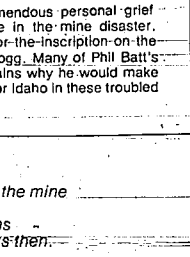
Please meet an exceptional man . .



May 2, 1972, disaster struck the Kellogg mining district. When the smoke and fire cleared, 91 miners had lost their lives deep in the Sunshine mine. Far to the south, a farmer-legislator from Wilder penned a tribute to those miners and their families. Phil Batt, a Republican, not only wrote the poem, he dedicated it on the floor of the Idaho Senate to a democrat, the late Art Manley, who had represented Kellogg for many years in the Idaho Legislature. Manley felt a tremendous personal grief at the loss of his townspeople in the mine disaster. The poem was later adopted for the inscription on the memorial to the miners in Kellogg. Many of Phil Batt's friends believe this poem explains why he would make such an exceptional governor for Idaho in these troubled times.

Our tongues have not tasted the bitter dust
The roar of the drills has never reached our ears.
Unfelt to us is the darkness of the shafts.

Yet we are Idahoans
And we were miners then.

We are farmers

We run the water from melted snows onto parched desert soil.

The planted seeds take root and grow
The harvest fills our granaries

The pits are strange to us
But we are Idahoans
And we were miners then.

We are loggers

We are your neighbors
We share the high country with you

But we sing our song
To the buzzing of the chainsaw
And do our dance on the spinning logs

There's no room in the mine
For our trees to fall
But we are Idahoans
And we were miners then.

We are cattlemen, innkeepers, merchants, men of the law and men of the cloth
Ours are a thousand trades
But only you go into the bowels of the earth to do your daily chores.

Yet we are all Idahoans
And we were miners then.

Yes, we were miners;
We waited in spirit at the mouth of the pit
Ached in unison at the news of the dead
Joined the jubilation at the rescue of the living
Marvelled at the poise of the tiny community.

And we became strong
The flux of the widows' tears welded your strength into our bodies.

And we were all Idahoans
And we were all miners
And we were all proud.

Business Beat

U.S. Steel closes Utah mine

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — U.S. Steel announced Wednesday it will close its Geneva mine at Horse Canyon, Utah, laying off 73 miners indefinitely.

The layoffs will occur Oct. 14.

Company officials blamed the layoffs on a lack of steel demand due to the recession and "the record percentage of foreign steel imports into the western market."

Jack Bollow, spokesman for U.S. Steel, said any resumption of operations at the Geneva mine will depend upon improved business conditions, but said there are no plans to reopen the mine in the foreseeable future.

Bollow said a five-person skeleton crew will operate the Geneva mine near East Carbon City "to keep it in a standby position."

Geneva has laid off about 1,700 workers, with some 3,000 still operating the steel mill at reduced levels. U.S. Steel's Atlantic City Ore Operations near Lander, Wyo. are now temporarily suspended, with about 460 miners out of work.

Billings sells Provo site

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Billings Corp. has sold land in south Provo for $5 million to pay off company debts and buy up minority interests in the Billings Computer Corp.

"With the land sale and paying off debts, we are absolutely debt free and register year-to-date earnings of $2.1 million," company president Roger Billings said Tuesday.

Billings Corp., with headquarters in Independence, Mo., is involved in the research and development of hydrogen powered energy systems for cars and homes. The firm also owns a computer manufacturing company based in Provo. The hydrogen operation was originally located in Provo, but has been moved to Missouri.

Asian trade still restrained

NEW YORK (UPI) — Australian Foreign Minister Tony Street said "restrictive bilateral solutions" to world economic problems are frustrating the growth of developing countries and the West should look to the Pacific region for recovery of the world economy.

"The balance of U.S. trade has moved across the Pacific and the countries of Southeast and East Asia represent engines for world economic recovery," Street said in a speech to the Asian Society Tuesday.

Street said the region "has been transformed in a decade" and economic change has arrived.

"Having waited so long for Asia's growth we should now avoid frustrating it and look together toward the Pacific for future growth and recovery of the world economy."

Government seeks snitchers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Exporters of U.S. electronics equipment should inform on those who illegally transfer American technology to foreign countries, the Commerce Department's new chief law enforcement officer says.

Theodore Wai Wu, newly appointed deputy secretary of Commerce for export control, said Tuesday the government expects voluntary compliance with new restrictions on technology export as well as tips about manufacturers who may be violating the law.

"The time is past when the industry can look out the window, watch the illegal transfer of technology to the Soviet Union, and not do anything about it," he told 200 executives attending a seminar sponsored by the Foreign Trade Association of Southern California.

Credit cards go to court

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Credit cards will be as good as gold soon in the Municipal Courts.

The Board of Supervisors approved a plan Tuesday allowing people to pay parking tickets, Municipal Court fees, fines and bail with their Visa or MasterCards.

Supervisors said they expect the county to gain as much as $150,000 a year from a service fee of $2 per transaction. The money is tentatively earmarked for criminal justice programs.

General Electric earnings rise

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — General Electric Co. Wednesday reported its third quarter earnings rose 11 percent to $451 million or $1.99 a share from $405 million or $1.78 a share during the same period last year.

Sales for the third quarter, however, declined 4 percent to $6.385 billion from $6.636 billion, the company said.

For the first nine months, General Electric's net income rose almost 8 percent to $1.293 billion or $5.70 a share from $1.2 billion or $5.27 a share during the same period last year.

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average soared 37.07 points Wednesday — the second best gain in its history — on 93.57 million shares as Wall Street's summer-fall rally revived on hopes for lower interest rates.

Institutions swarmed into the market when federal funds rates banks charge one another dropped to 9 ½ percent and they were not deterred when the Federal Reserve took some funds out of the banking system.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip stocks, which gained 3.58 points Tuesday, closed at 944.26, the highest level since 944.35 on Aug. 13, 1981. The Dow's best gain was a 38.81-point surge on Aug. 18 at the outset of the recent rally.

The closely watched average, which had leveled off the past three weeks, has gained 177.34 points since hitting 27-month low of 776.92 on Aug. 12. Technical analysts said the Dow found buying support at the 900 level.

The New York Stock Exchange volume of 93,570,000 shares, up from the 69,770,000 traded Tuesday, was the ninth busiest on record. The 137.28 million traded Aug. 26 was the heaviest session.

The bond market rallied and U.S. government securities rose as a result of the lower fed funds rates, indicating investors do not believe the Fed will tighten credit in the wake of a surge in the nation's money supply.

"The economy's too weak for the Fed to boost interest rates higher regardless of the money supply," said Monte Gordon, Dreyfus Corp. vice president.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said money supply figures will be "so fouled" up they will be almost impossible to interpret because of the advent of new bank accounts with no interest rate ceilings.

Regan also predicted interest rates would move lower though the course might be rocky at times. And Richard Pratt, Federal Home Loan Bank chairman, forecast as drop in mortgage rates within a matter of months.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 2.14 to 72.20, the highest level since 72.43 on Dec. 11, 1981. The price of an average share increased 88 cents. The paper value of all NYSE issues increased an estimated $32.1 billion during the day.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 3.99 to 125.97, a new 1982 high. Advances routed declines 1,337-294 among the 1,938 issues traded.

Chester Pado, vice president at G. Tsai in Los Angeles, said "an article in the New York Times about Morgan Stanley analysts recommending blue-chip stocks triggered a lot of buying."

Pado, who believes Wednesday's rally might be the second stage of a bull market, also said "General Electric's higher earnings and IBM's strong showing helped the psychological outlook for the market."

Analysts said foreign investors appeared to be placing money in quality U.S. stocks because of concern about international financial problems.

FCC reshapes lengthy review into WATS line client charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Communications Commission reshaped its lengthy investigation into American Telephone & Telegraph's WATS tariff Wednesday, rejecting AT&T arguments that an appeals court decision prevented the move.

The action is the latest in six years of effort to come up with a decision about whether WATS rates are justified.

WATS service allows high volume users to place or receive long-distance calls within specified areas at less than standard rates. AT&T has about 80,000 WATS customers.

The case began in 1976 when the FCC found AT&T's tariff revisions for WATS from 1973 to 1976 were not supported by accompanying AT&T data. However, that decision and two subsequent ones allowed the rates to remain in effect.

The FCC then ruled that WATS and regular long-distance services were "like services" and therefore WATS customers may not be due a price break. AT&T appealed and in 1980, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia returned the case to the FCC and ordered it to come up with a plan to determine whether WATS rates are justified.

In its decision Wednesday, the FCC emphasized it had reservations about the lawfulness and reasonableness of the WATS tariff in relationship to other users of the network. It said that will be part of its continuing investigation.

The FCC expects to complete its investigation within 10 months.

"We have nothing to hide," AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner said after the meeting. "The WATS rates are fair and fully justified and we look upon this as an opportunity for the FCC to finally put an end to this long-running scenario and we're happy it placed a time limit on the investigation."

In another decision Wednesday, the FCC ordered MCI Telecommunications Inc. to begin paying AT&T rates determined by a special industry agreement on compensating AT&T for use of its interconnections by other common carriers.

MCI had argued that it was exempt from the agreement and should be paying normal business rates.

It interpreted the agreement as dealing only with connections between other common carriers and the Bell System's central switching offices.

Report predicts big rate hikes — especially for rural areas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Recent government and court actions could boost the cost of basic telephone service during the next five years more than 75 percent overall and even more in rural areas, a new congressional report said Wednesday.

Based on an investigation by one of its subcommittees, the House Government Operations panel estimated costs could be dramatically increased as a result of actions by the Federal Communications Commission and the divestiture of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. as the result of consent decree approved in August by a federal judge.

Many rural areas would be bearing increases of more than 83 percent, the report said.

About half of the anticipated increase can be directly attributed to actions by the FCC, it said. For example, it noted that in at least one instance, the FCC preempted the authority of the state commissions over intrastate telephone service.

"How can the state commissions act to guarantee the provision of telephone service to the citizens of that state if the FCC preempts their authority to do so?" Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., chairman of the government information and individual rights subcommittee, asked in a statement accompanying the report.

"This nation has worked for years to provide universal telephone service at reasonable rates," English said. "Now there is a danger that rural customers will once again become second class citizens in terms of telephone service."

The report recommends the FCC specifically consider the effects of its actions on rural telephone customers and on the goal of universal telephone service — a basic goal outlined by the government decades ago when it gave AT&T monopoly status to hook up the nation.

The report also directs the FCC to speed up its analysis on the impact of its decisions on rural telephone rates and services.

World banks in crisis period

By DENIS G. GULINO
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Major U.S. banks face six months to a year of "serious problems" but can depend on help from the government if debtor nations default, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said Wednesday.

Citing financial crises in Mexico, Brazil and Argentina and other countries, Regan told a conference of bankers, "I think that all these problems, one by one, can be handled and are manageable.

"Collectively they present quite a risk if they were all to happen at once," the Treasury secretary acknowledged. But, he said, "I don't think this necessarily has to happen."

Regan addressed members of the Dealer Bank Association, a non-profit organization representing banks which underwrite, trade or deal in a variety of government securities and foreign exchange.

Despite criticism of U.S. banks for having been too anxious to make large loans to other countries, most of the problems were caused by a sudden end to worldwide inflation that made paying back loans much harder, he said.

"It came on very unexpectedly, much deeper than any economist had forecast and it's going to last longer than most economists forecast," Regan said. "As a result we have these serious problems."

Regan said banks are facing "a lot more streetchouts, refinancings, things of that nature," while the U.S. government is trying to help prevent major debtor nations like Mexico from being declared in default.

"I think we have six months to a year here where things are going to be a little bit of touch and go," Regan said, "but I think we can handle it."

Regan called international banking "good business, both for our own banks as well as for our international relationships." But he warned, "Obviously there will come times, such as the present, when a lot of that seems to be in jeopardy. In that case I think its up to the United States government to be as helpful as it can."

As long as the bank problems do not involve "absolute chicanery and malfeasance and all other such hideous things," Regan said, the Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve will be ready to help.

"If these are events. . .caused by outside pressures. . .and we can be helpful I think it is up to the government, both through the central bank as well as through the Treasury, to be available, to be helpful," Regan said.

Regan also reiterated his proposal for creation of a new International Monetary Fund emergency account in case several more nations experience financial crises at the same time. The IMF channels credit to financially ailing countries with tough conditions attached.

"If there is a large massive need for money. . .they could tap this emergency fund on a short-term basis and utilize it as a standby or as a reserve in the event of a worldwide heavy type of collapse," Regan said.

September sales off 6%

1982 domestic car sales drop 16%

DETROIT (UPI) — Domestic car sales during September fell 6 percent from depressed year-ago levels and automakers finished the 1982 model year 16 percent off 1981's pace.

It was the worst year for automakers since 1961 and imports grabbed a 27.9 percent share for the model year, up from 26.4 percent in 1981.

Figures released Tuesday showed General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp., American Motors Co., and Volkswagen of America sold 5,543,006 cars this model year, down 15.9 percent from 6,590,017 units in the 1981 model year.

During September, total industry sales were 488,452, a drop of 5.8 percent from the 518,522 reported in the similar 1981 period.

Imports totaled 2,140,873 for the 1982 model year, down 9.3 percent from the 2,360,546 in the prior year. For September, sales of foreign cars in the U.S. increased 9.1 percent, from 167,219 to 182,500.

L. Raymond Windecker, an analyst with Ford, said the industry's September figure translated into a domestic annual rate of 6.3 million units.

June was the low point of the year at 4.9 million, he said, while July was 5.3 million, August 5.4 million and September 6.3 million.

"It's slowly getting better from month to month," he said. "There's every indication that fourth quarter sales will be above a year ago.

For the model year, both AMC and Volkswagen sales plunged about 32 percent. GM sales were down 16 percent while Chrysler levels were down 14 percent and Ford 13 percent.

Despite the industry monthly downturn, Chrysler showed sales up 14 percent in September and AMC reported an increase of less than 1 percent.

GM's monthly sales were down 7.5 percent, Ford's dropped 6.1 percent and VWA reported a whopping decrease of 37.3 percent.

Philip Benton Jr., Ford vice president, said he was optimistic sales wpuld improve as the economy healed.

"There are many older cars on the road that need replacement, and any upturn in the economy should be magnified in auto sales," he said.

The import share of the September market was 27.2 percent, still strong but down from the past three months when the share was above 30 percent. In August, imports grabbed 32.5 percent of the market.

Dip in Japanese exports bucks 30-year trend

TOKYO (UPI) — In a dramatic reversal of a 30-year trend, Japan's exports will drop this year because of the recession in the United States and other countries that once snapped up Japanese cars and cameras, government economists said Wednesday.

"First and foremost, it is the global slump, especially the prolonged downturn of the American economy" that is hurting Japan, said Hiroshi Seto, a spokesman at the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, which sponsored the study.

The United States takes one-quarter of Japan's exports.

The panel of government economists said Japan's exports for the fiscal year ending March 31 are expected to be $140 billion to $145 billion, down 6.2 percent from the previous fiscal year.

"It's the first time in 30 years that we are going to have a negative growth in exports," said Seto.

A report from the private sector echoed the government forecast.

"There is no evident solution now for boosting Japanese exports," said one of the nation's major financial institutions, the Sanwa Bank, in its October economic newsletter.

The government economists' study is expected to be submitted Thursday to a conference of cabinet ministers and industrialists meeting for the first time in 11 years to discuss how to get Japan's imports growing again. A recent report showed a $54.2 billion drop in imports from April to August.

The United States and West European nations, which last year ran a combined trade deficit of about $30 billion with Japan, have demanded Tokyo increase imports.

But financial sources said the latest government report could turn Thursday's meeting into a discussion of how to boost exports as well as increase imports.

In the first six months of 1982 car exports were down 14.3 percent from the comparable 1981 period, quartz watches were down 9 percent and numerically controlled machine tools were off 22.8 percent.

The new export prediction is part of a somber outlook for the economy as a whole. In June, the government cut its predicted economic growth rate for the year from 5.2 percent to just over 3 percent after inflation. Private economists are now questioning whether it will even be that high.

In September, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, saying the economy was in "unprecedented difficulty," outlined emergency measures, including a freezing federal employee pay hikes and clamps on budget hikes.

Economists said that the recession has even negated the effects of a weak yen, which normally helps exports.

The yen closed Wednesday at 274.70 to the dollar, its lowest price since June 8, 1977.

Friedman blames recession on 'dismal' Fed performance

DALLAS (UPI) — Conservative economist Milton Friedman said the Federal Reserve Board's "dismal" performance has contributed to a long, severe recession.

Speaking before 2,000 businessmen Tuesday, Friedman blamed the Fed's inability to prevent wild gyrations in the money supply for an unusually long and severe recession during the transition to a less inflationary economy.

"There is not an institution in the United States whose performance has been so dismal and its reputation so high as the Federal Reserve Board," he said.

In October 1979, the Fed announced it would shifts its emphasis from interest rates to concentration on controlling the growth of the money supply — a version of the monetarist strategy advocated by Friedman.

"On the average the Fed has done well," he said, "but there have been wild gyrations (in the money supply) from the average. Those wild fluctuations have done the harm."

In his speech at Southern Methodist University, Friedman also said raising taxes will not reduce President Reagan's budget.

"The problem is not deficits but the size of the government," he said.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat was narrowly mixed, corn and oats fractionally higher and soybeans higher at the close Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was off ½ to up 1 cent; corn up 1 to ¼; oats up 1 to ¼; and soybeans up 4 ¼ to 3 ¼.

Short-covering occurred throughout the session. Buying enthusiasm picked up after commodities had hit contract lows earlier in the week.

Some profit-taking was evident at the higher levels, floor sources said.

Soybeans gained primarily on professional and commission house buying in addition to a continued demand for soybean meal in Rotterdam.

The weather and the lack of farmer selling was supportive to soybeans and the grains, along with stronger gold and financial futures.

Grain analysts expected some changes Thursday when private forecaster Conrad Leslie issues his October crop production figures. They said the soybean figure would be unchanged to lower but corn production would be raised.

The USDA will release its updated report next Tuesday.

The outside markets were mixed.
